edifice: ('ed ə fis), n. a building or other structure,

Being located in a cornfield might not qualify a building as a large, imposing edifice, yet there's an exception to every rule. We found it in Ashburn.

Built in 1969, Broad Run has had plenty of room to grow, and that's precisely what we've done. First we attained the new wing, which houses the business department of the school. Second, we gained the stadium lights, which the Boosters and students worked hard to achieve. The new gym was completed last year. This year's additions were the Vo-Tech house and the electronic bleachers for the old gym. We even have immense playing fields, something our urban friends lack, for athletics and P.E. classes.

Frisbee champ Mike Piersol takes a breather in the senior court.

Fresh country air helps Mark Williamson study.

Stretching out, the Varsity Football team prepares for a hard practice.

Running for their buses, students can't believe it's finally Friday.

esp. if large or imposing.

Because of the rural setting of the school, most students can't walk to school. The alternatives are riding the bus, driving your own car, or riding with a friend.

"What Is a Hero?" is the title of the first English paper required of seniors, and Lora Bleutge plans to adequately research the topic.

Taking advantage of the crisp fall day, a group of freshmen relax outside the cafeteria.

routine: (rū 'tēn), n. a fixed, regular method of doing things.

We moved to the sound of the time, the bell. Approximately every hour we changed, but this was the only routine at Broad Run.

We went to school from 9:00 to 3:15, but between those hours a lot happened. During lunch the seniors played Frisbee on the lawn. Juniors finished their homework over pizza. Sophomores gossiped over the latest romances. Freshmen had food fights.

Between classes seniors made out by the heaters. Juniors tried to finish their homework in the halls. Sophomores followed the varsity football players around. Freshmen scurried to classes.

Hectic, harried, energetic, relaxed, social, varied: a day at Broad Run. Routine, although not according to Webster.

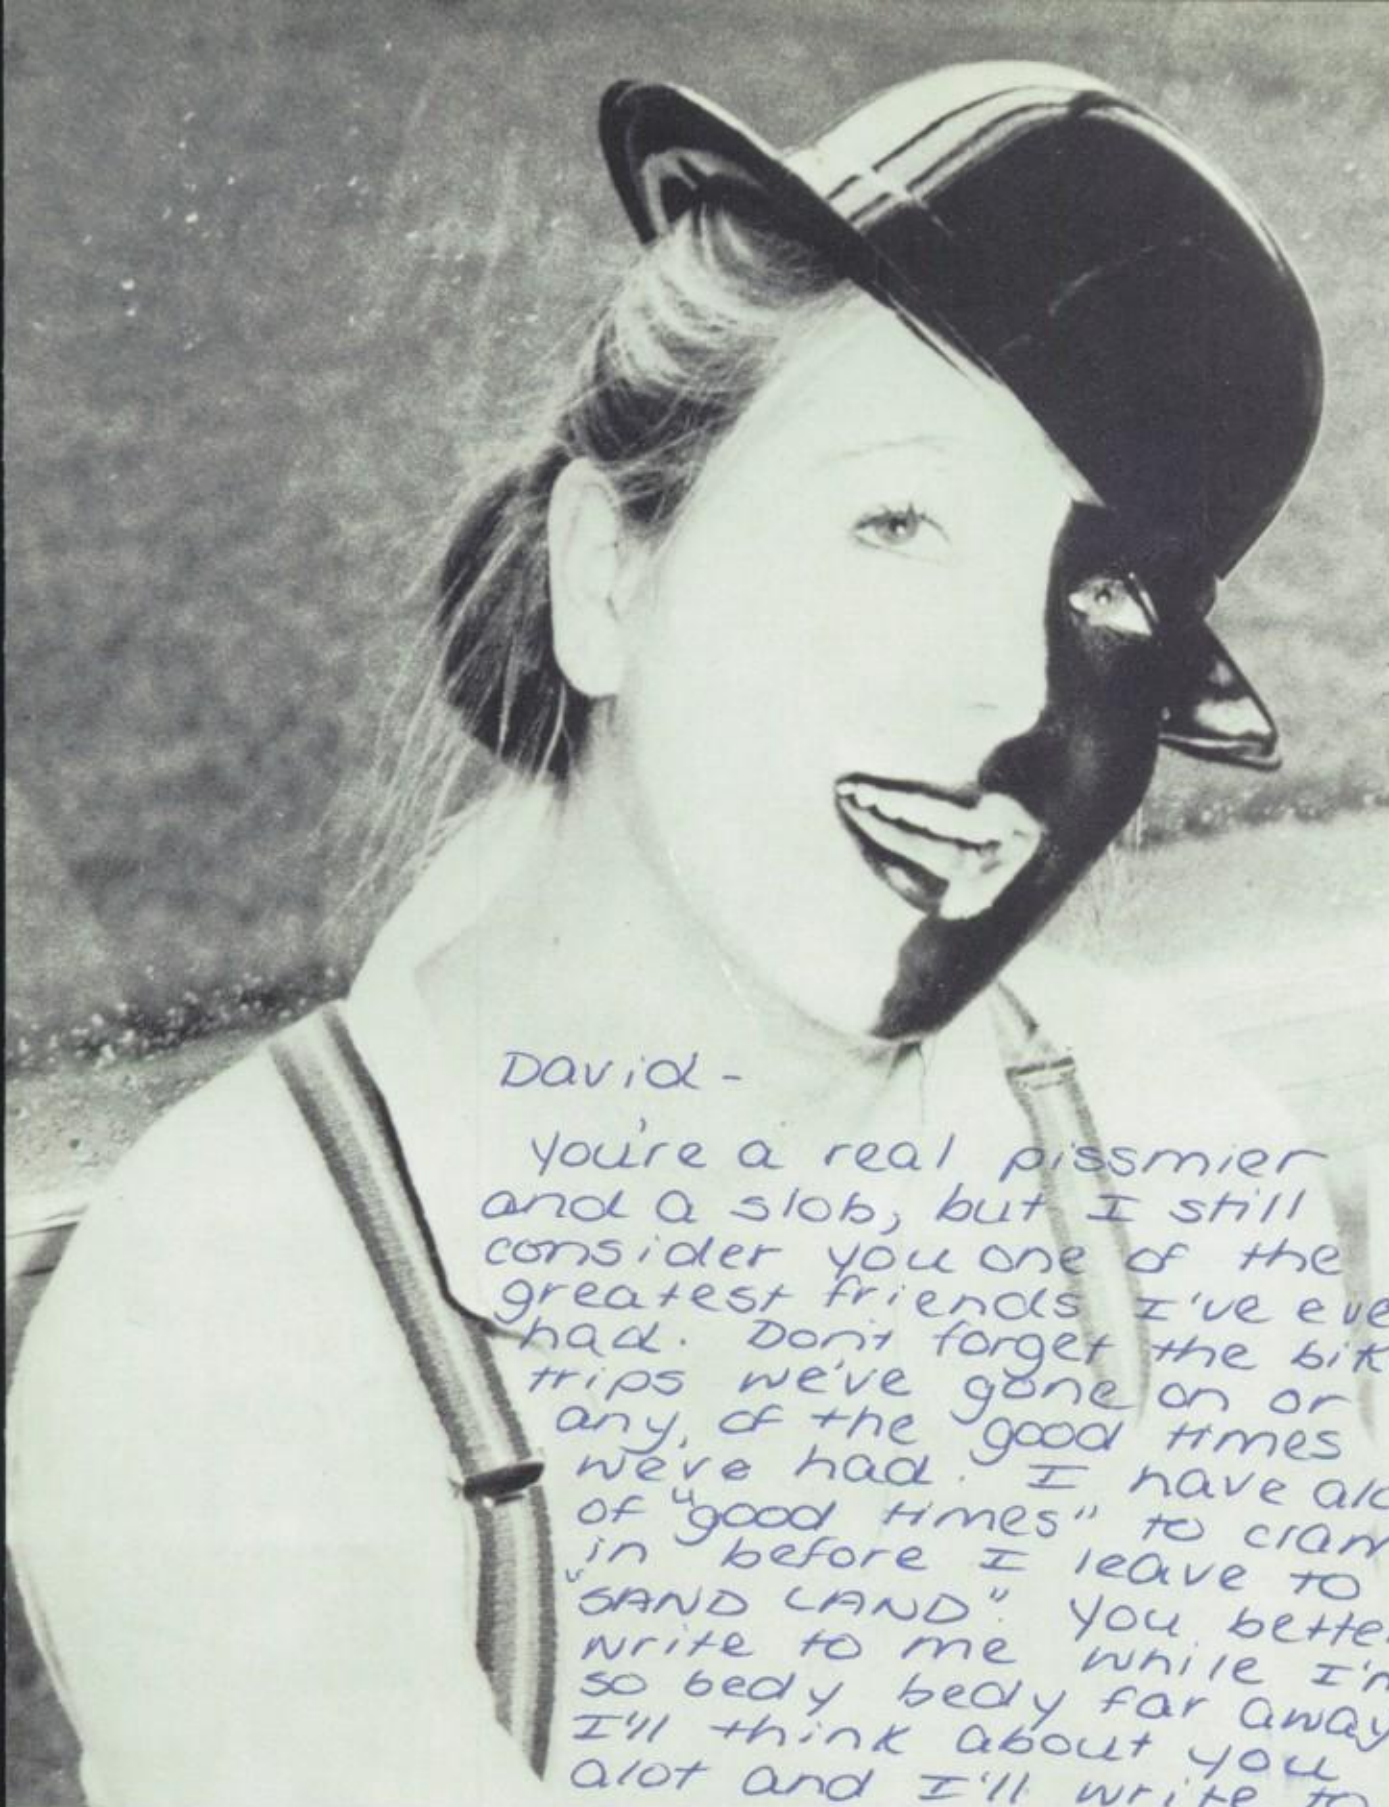

Cheesing it up outside the cafeteria are David Thornton and Jeff Pelasera.

No bull is sold at BR according to Roy Tokeshi.

At the annual senior breakfast at McDonald's in Herndon, Liz Sestak is the fairest Roman of all.

David -

You're a real pissmier and a slob, but I still consider you one of the greatest friends I've ever had. Don't forget the bike trips we've gone on or any of the good times we've had. I have alot of "good times" to cram in before I leave to "SAND LAND". You better write to me while I'm so bedy bedy far away. I'll think about you alot and I'll write to back. So don't change too much - Save a little roundness for when I come back. I'll miss you alot. Take care of yourself. Don't chase too many girls or do any of that "bad boy" stuff. Love, Peace & ^{weirdness} ~~weirdness~~ superior: (su 'pir e ə), adj. showing a feeling above others; proud.

A Spartan. Maroon and Gold. You saw people wearing these colors in the halls, but they would be meaningless if the individuals were not special.

Students expressed their talents by joining athletic teams and organizations. Athletic practices began in the summer. Teams suffered through 90 degree heat, but the rewards for the practices were exciting finishes. In organizations, participation was greater this year than last. Clubs provided entertainment on Fridays during activity period. Money raised from these activities funded various club trips and scholarships. The band marched in the halls and on the lawn to achieve perfection. They entertained the crowds during the halftimes of football games.

All these organizations would not have survived without people. Students gave their time and effort to make this school special. We succeeded. Indeed, wearing the maroon and gold of the Spartans is a symbol of pride.

A typical senior locker; Terry McCarthy fills hers with stickers, Oreos, and no books.

Going home, the best part of the day.

Outside the cafeteria is a favorite hangout of Heidi Piersol, Pam Guthrie, Aida Aragon, and Tammy Fleming.

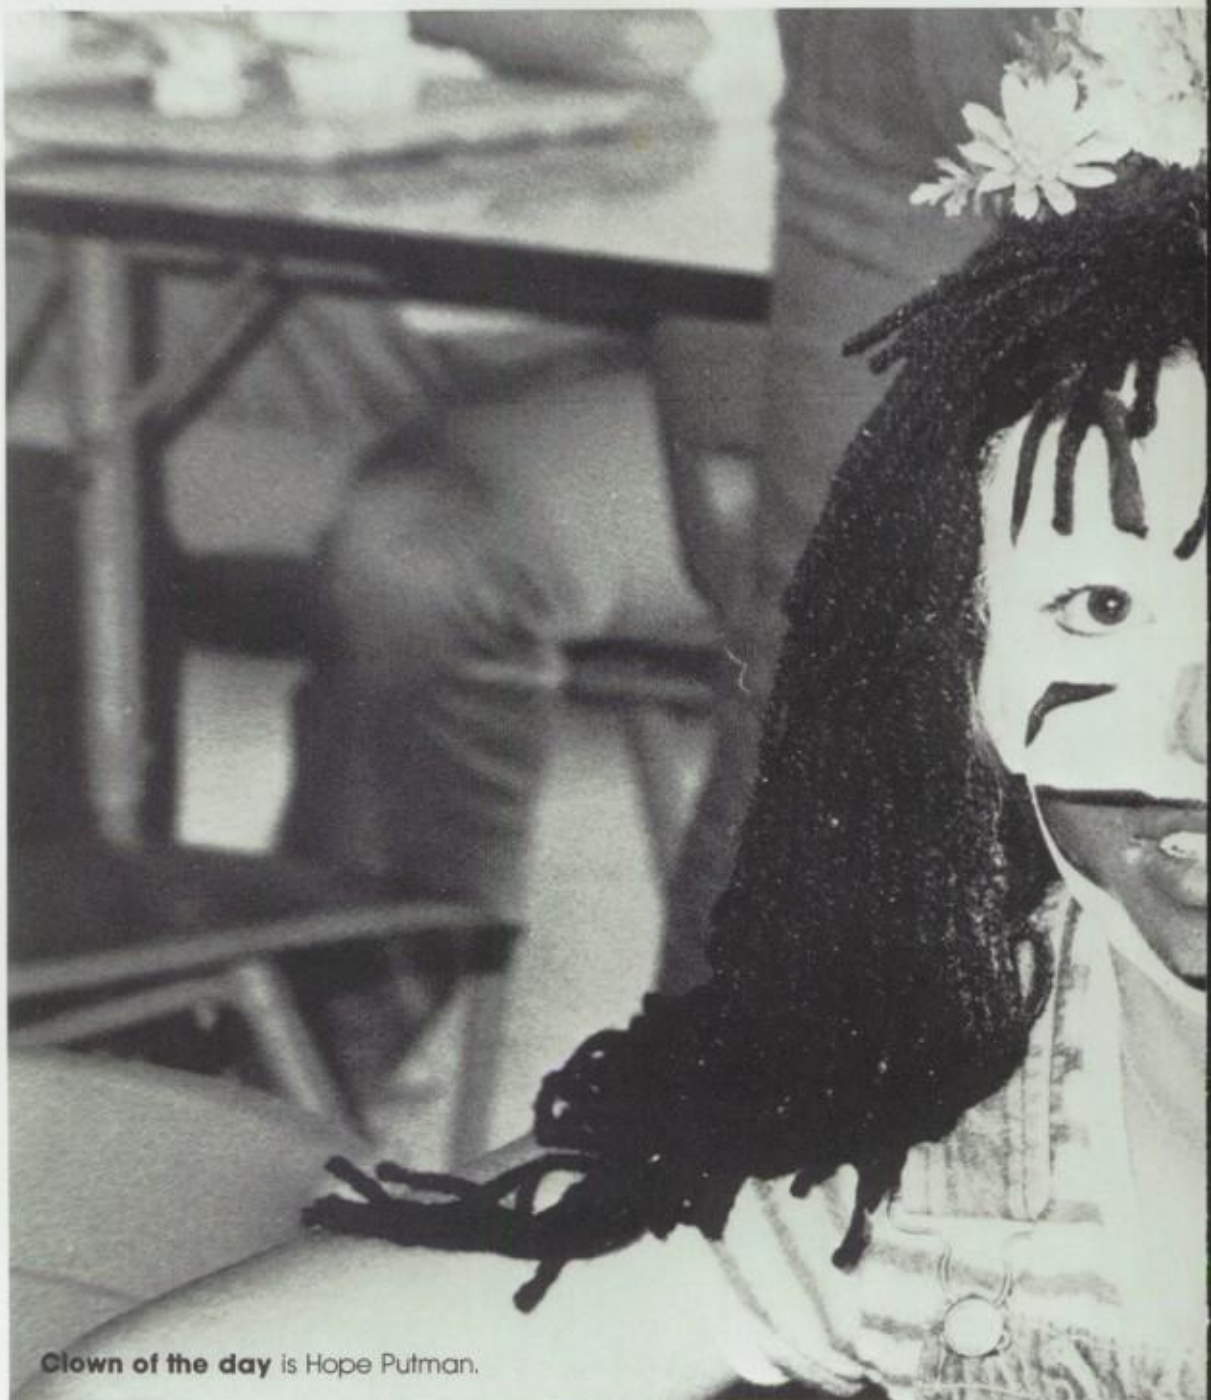

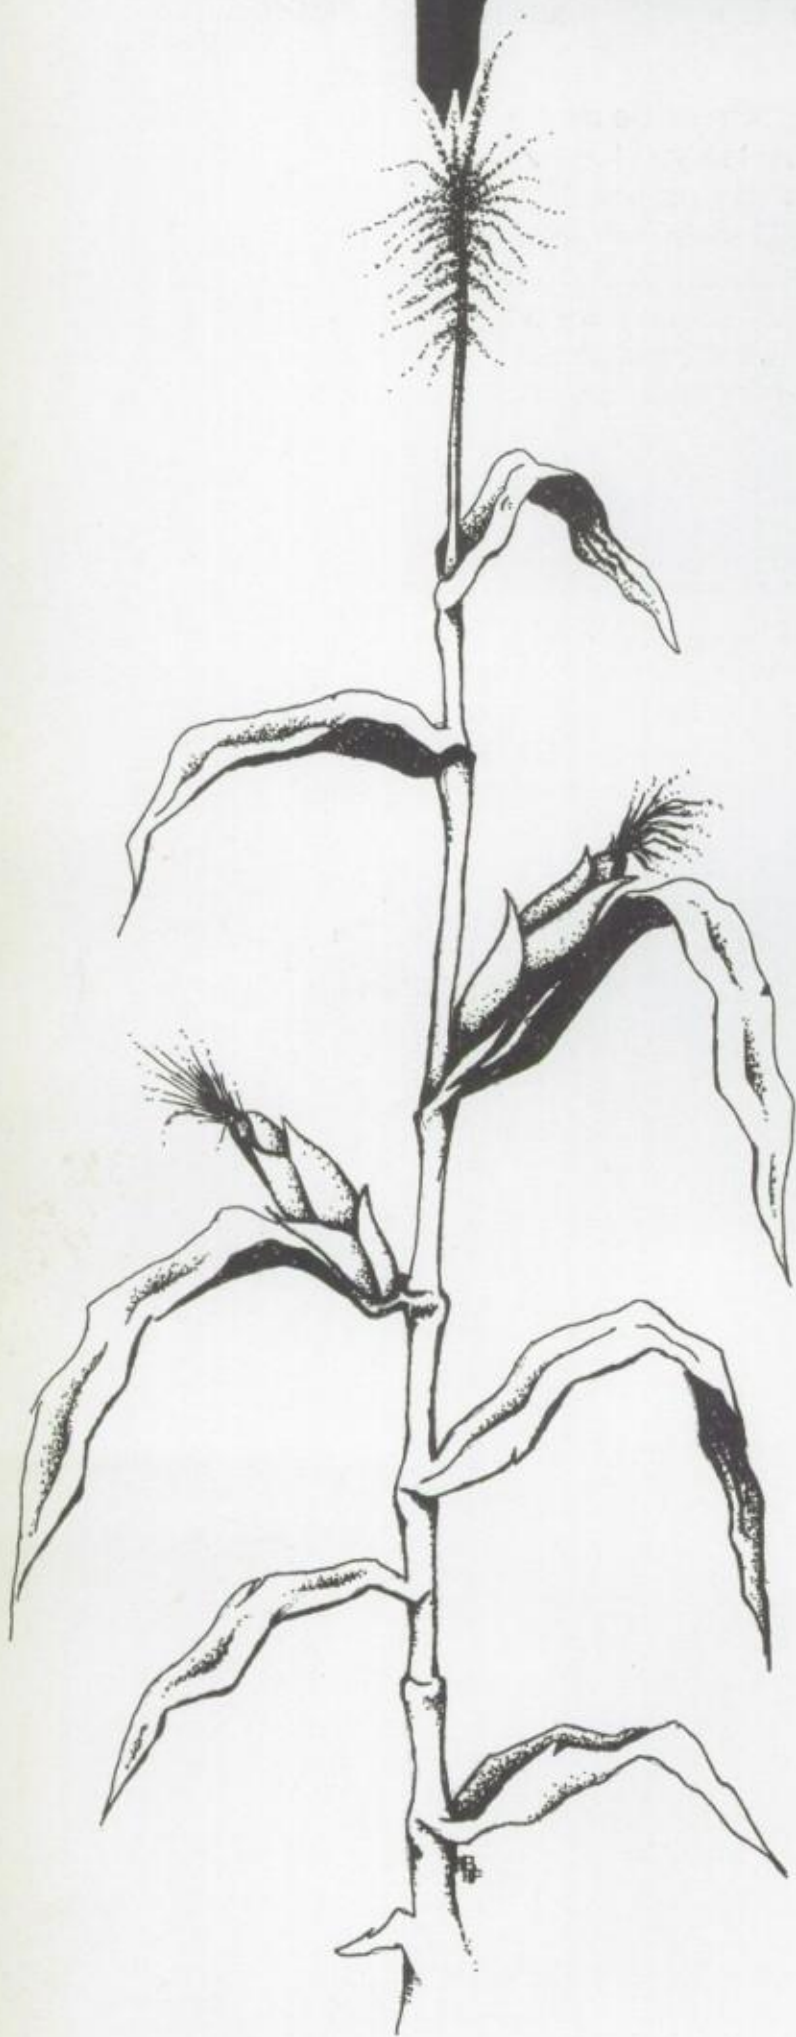

Prices of school lunches and a la carte went up, but Angie Rogers still enjoys the pizza.

Showing her delight over today's government test is senior Janie Aylestock.

The second home of a cheerleader is her locker.

Clown of the day is Hope Putman.

Student Life

Requirements: Be in grades 9-12. Attend Broad Run High School. Have fun.

We cover the red letter days from the magazine drive to the prom. We tell you the fads and the flops, who did what, and what they wore. For homecoming, Christmas, Valentine's Day, we really dress-up. On Homecoming, we are bizarre. At Christmas time, we are elves. On Valentine's Day, we are sweeties. In short everything worth mentioning is coming up next.

David, been

Junior Sharla Burwick and date Kevin Vest enjoy the music of Stop Light.

The Finest Hour

What do a 5-lb. Hershey Bar, the Easter Bunny, and popcorn have in common? They were raffled, sold, and peddled to help the junior class finance the 1981 prom.

The Class of '82 had various problems to overcome before the prom could become a reality. Monetary difficulties forced the juniors to hold the dance in the newly completed auxiliary gym. Some of the seniors wanted the date changed because it conflicted with a RUSH concert at the Capital Centre.

Those who stuck it out, however, were pleasantly surprised when they arrived at the prom on the eve of May 16, 1981. The dancers could hardly tell that the room was a gym. A huge rainbow was suspended from the ceiling, and two large murals hung from either end of the room. The band, Stop Light, played a variety of music. Approximately 200 people attended the prom. Everyone agreed; the Class of 1982 had created a memorable evening.

Dressed to the hilt, seniors Carlton Hopkins and Cindi Hatton survey the scene.

Masquerade

Who didn't wear clothes to school? A majority of Broad Run students didn't, on dress up days at least.

Dress up days were a harmless way to promote school spirit. During homecoming week, anything from punk rockers to babies were seen roaming the halls of Broad Run. Crazy hats, twins, and Halloween goblins were also spotted in the midst of the Spartans.

The number of people out of each homeroom who dressed up were counted. The sophomores won the contest by a large margin.

Coming Home to Victory

A feast of barbecue beef and brownies, sponsored by the Booster Club, started the Homecoming night festivities. Then came the bonfire, a tradition here that promotes spirit.

The parade of floats was then driven around the field, followed by the princesses in jeeps.

The game started, and soon it was halftime. The princesses were escorted onto the field by the guy of their choice. Last year's queen, Debbie Fritts, followed them. Then the moment came: Debbie crowned JoAnn Caylor as the 1981 Homecoming Queen. To top the night off, the Spartans came away with a 21-0 victory over Clarke County.

The hard work of the seniors paid off when they won first prize in the float contest. This masterpiece almost missed the parade when it was too wide to fit through the gate to the track.

Senior princess JoAnn Caylor is crowned Homecoming Queen.

Homecoming Spirit

The final rehearsal for the princesses was Friday during the pep rally. During this time they could feel the tension growing higher. Then Dan Weber was announced as Mr. Homecoming of 1981. The spirit contest ended the pep rally, and the sophomores won the coveted spirit stick.

Saturday afternoon the seniors decorated the cafeteria with streamers and posters of many different colors. The dance was well-attended, and the band was crowd-pleaser. They even had a special slow dance for the homecoming court and for Mr. Homecoming.

Getting down to the music of the Glass Anvil are Dwayne Slyder and Kim Harton.

Upon selling 3 magazine subscriptions, Lori Lietzan is entitled to draw a ticket for a prize.

Prizes give incentive to the students of Broad Run.

Homeroom is extended to accommodate the hectic conditions created by eager students.

Easy Money

What was the easiest way for Broad Run organizations to make money this year? It was the third annual magazine drive.

An assembly on Sept. 24 kicked off the magazine drive, which lasted through Oct. 6. A representative from Sunland Corp. explained selling techniques and encouraged the students to sell by showing various prizes. Some of the best prizes included a stereo, television sets, radios, stuffed animals, and 5 and 10 lb. Hershey Bars.

This year students won a prize for every three subscriptions that they turned in. Extra prizes were awarded to top sellers each turn-in day. Tables set up in the foyer, where students turned in their subscriptions, were manned by teachers and parents.

Altogether we sold over $12,000 in magazine subscriptions. School organizations received 40% of this sum, which amounted to $4,600. The top salesman was sophomore Mike Nelson. According to organizer Mrs. Hershman, "The third annual magazine drive was a great success."

David,

I'm really sorry we didn't see much of each other this year. You're a good-looking guy with a great sense of humor and I think it was just my bad luck on my part.

I hope I see you over the summer. Maybe at one of the wild parties I know will be going on. Have fun, but stay out of trouble.

Love ya,

The Most

To be a senior is one thing, but to be elected for the Senior Superlatives is even better. The senior class elected these people for the different categories. This is a great honor for the seniors. "It feels really good to be voted on by our friends. I really appreciate it," said Jeff Gillette. Tina Kimmerly added, "It's fantastic!" When asked her reaction to her award, Nancy Timberlake replied, "It's super, and I would like to thank everyone so very much."

Class Flirt Dean Van Ness said, "It feels good to be elected." True to her superlative title, Toni Robinson said, "Somehow, I knew I was going to be picked for Most Uncontrollable."

Most Talented: Nancy Timberlake and Bobby Fulk

Most Likely to Succeed: Janie Aylestock and Dan Weber

Wild and Crazy

This year's seniors were wilder and crazier than ever. For instance, Doug Aylestock wore shorts to school in the winter. He also got a mohawk. Charlie Graham, a very rowdie person, is known for yelling in the halls between classes.

Another wild and crazy person is Terry McCarthy. She brought in an invisible dog leash with "Chuck the Chicken" in it, and she walked Chuck down the halls. At lunch she fed it French fries. Bobby Fulk consistently conforms to nonconformity by wearing weird outfits every day. To each his own!

Most Spirited: Charlie Graham and Carl York

Class Flirt: Barbara Ufke and Dean Van Ness

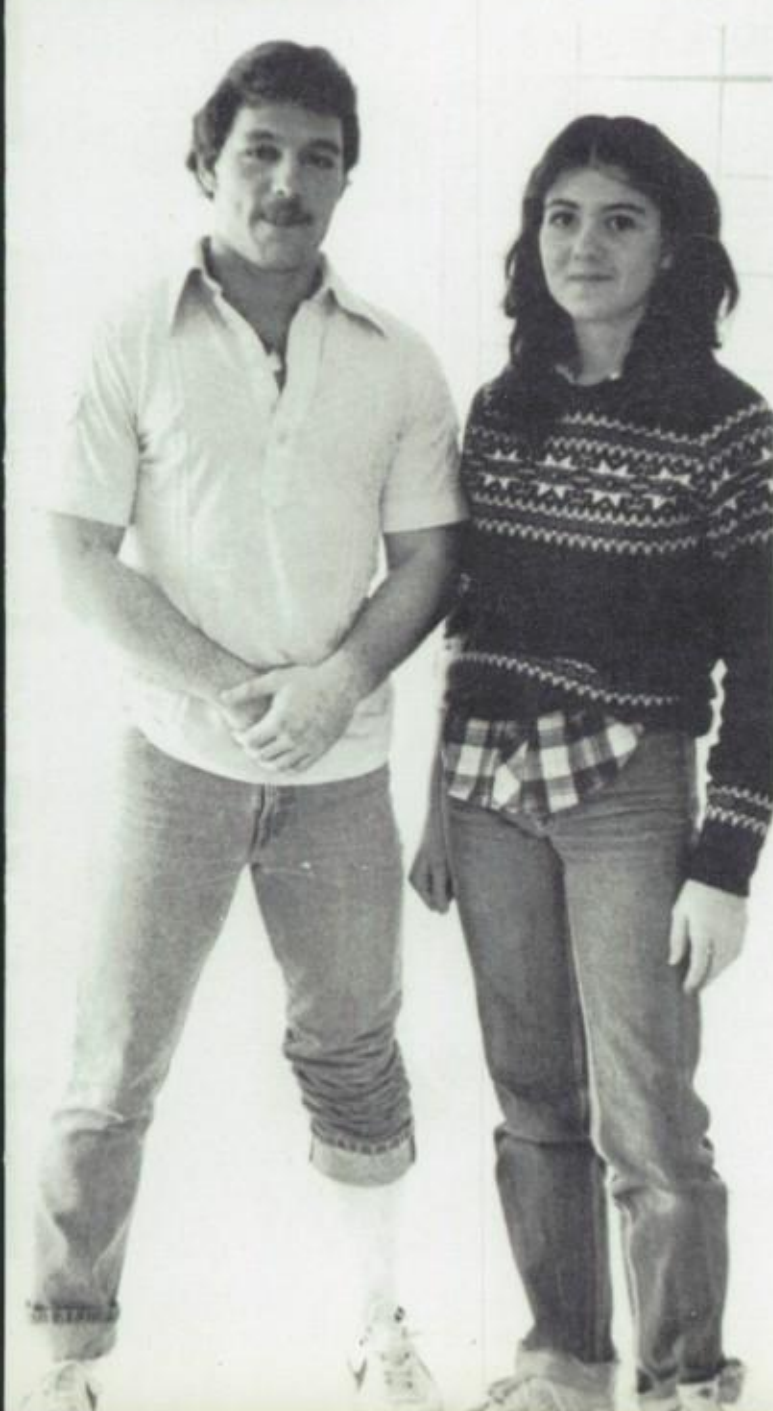

Most Athletic: Tina Kimmerly and Tommy Malloy

Best All Around: Beth Kelly and Dan Weber

Best Dressed: Terri Kent and Jeff Gillette

Most Uncontrollable: Toni Robinson and Doug Aylestock

Not only was the Rubik's Cube one of the school's favorite pastimes, it was one of the most difficult to figure out. The object of the cube is to get all of different colors onto their own sides. Here, a senior tries to solve the cube.

The Jordache Look is modelled by Gina Lawson and Kris Skillman.

In Vogue

You name, Broad Run had it. Calvin Klein walked through the halls. Gloria Vanderbilt sat through Algebra. These and other designer labels were seen on the back pockets of the numerous pairs of designer jeans strolling through the halls.

Different kinds of fashions were popular this year. The Western look was in, and many people wore Levi's and Stetsons.

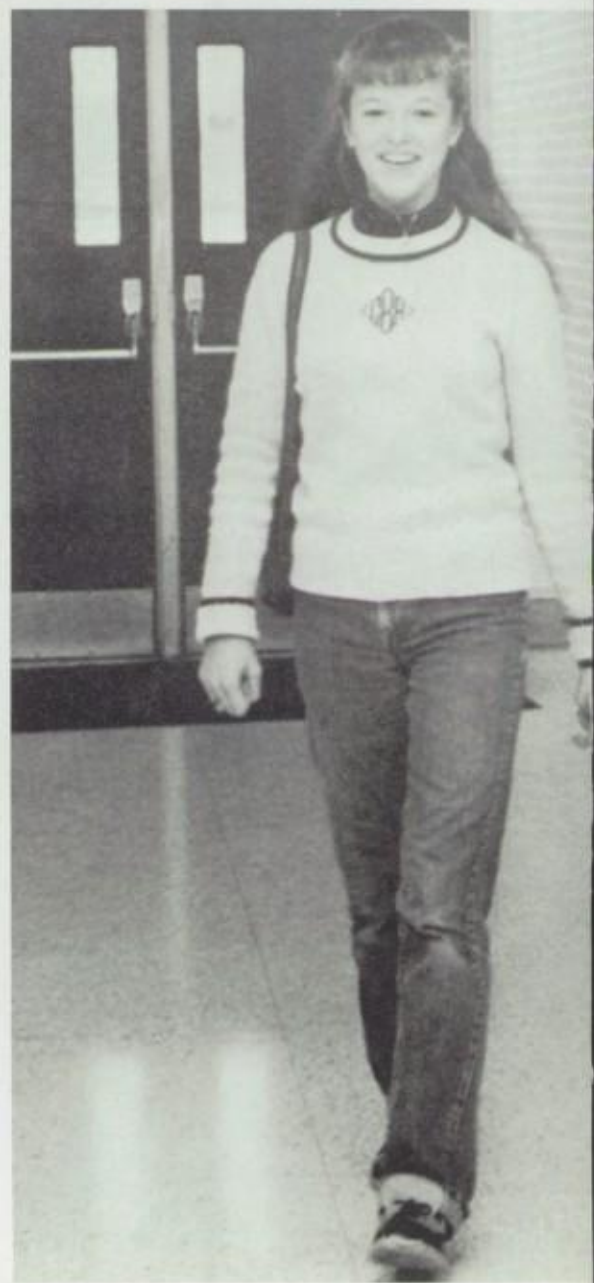

Preppies were nothing new at BR. Preppy clothes were all very expensive. Preppy posters and The Preppy Handbook all added to "preppy mania." Anti-preppies even had the slogan, "Save an alligator, shoot a preppy."

But fashions weren't the only trend to take BR this year. The Rubik's Cube became a favorite of many. This multi-colored cube caused frustration and even desperation for almost anyone who tried to solve it. Even the teachers got into the act by trying to figure it out during homeroom.

Our trends weren't totally original; they were enjoyed by many people across the nation. It was the people, more than the trends, that made our school "In Vogue."

Clad in duck shoes and a monogrammed sweater, Christina Beyer is a typical preppy. The word "preppy" comes from the phrase "preparatory school."

Smiling shyly, David Kirkwood stops to say "Hi".

Senior J.D. Schultz is never too old to play with his cars.

"What's a trend?" asks Bobby Fulk.

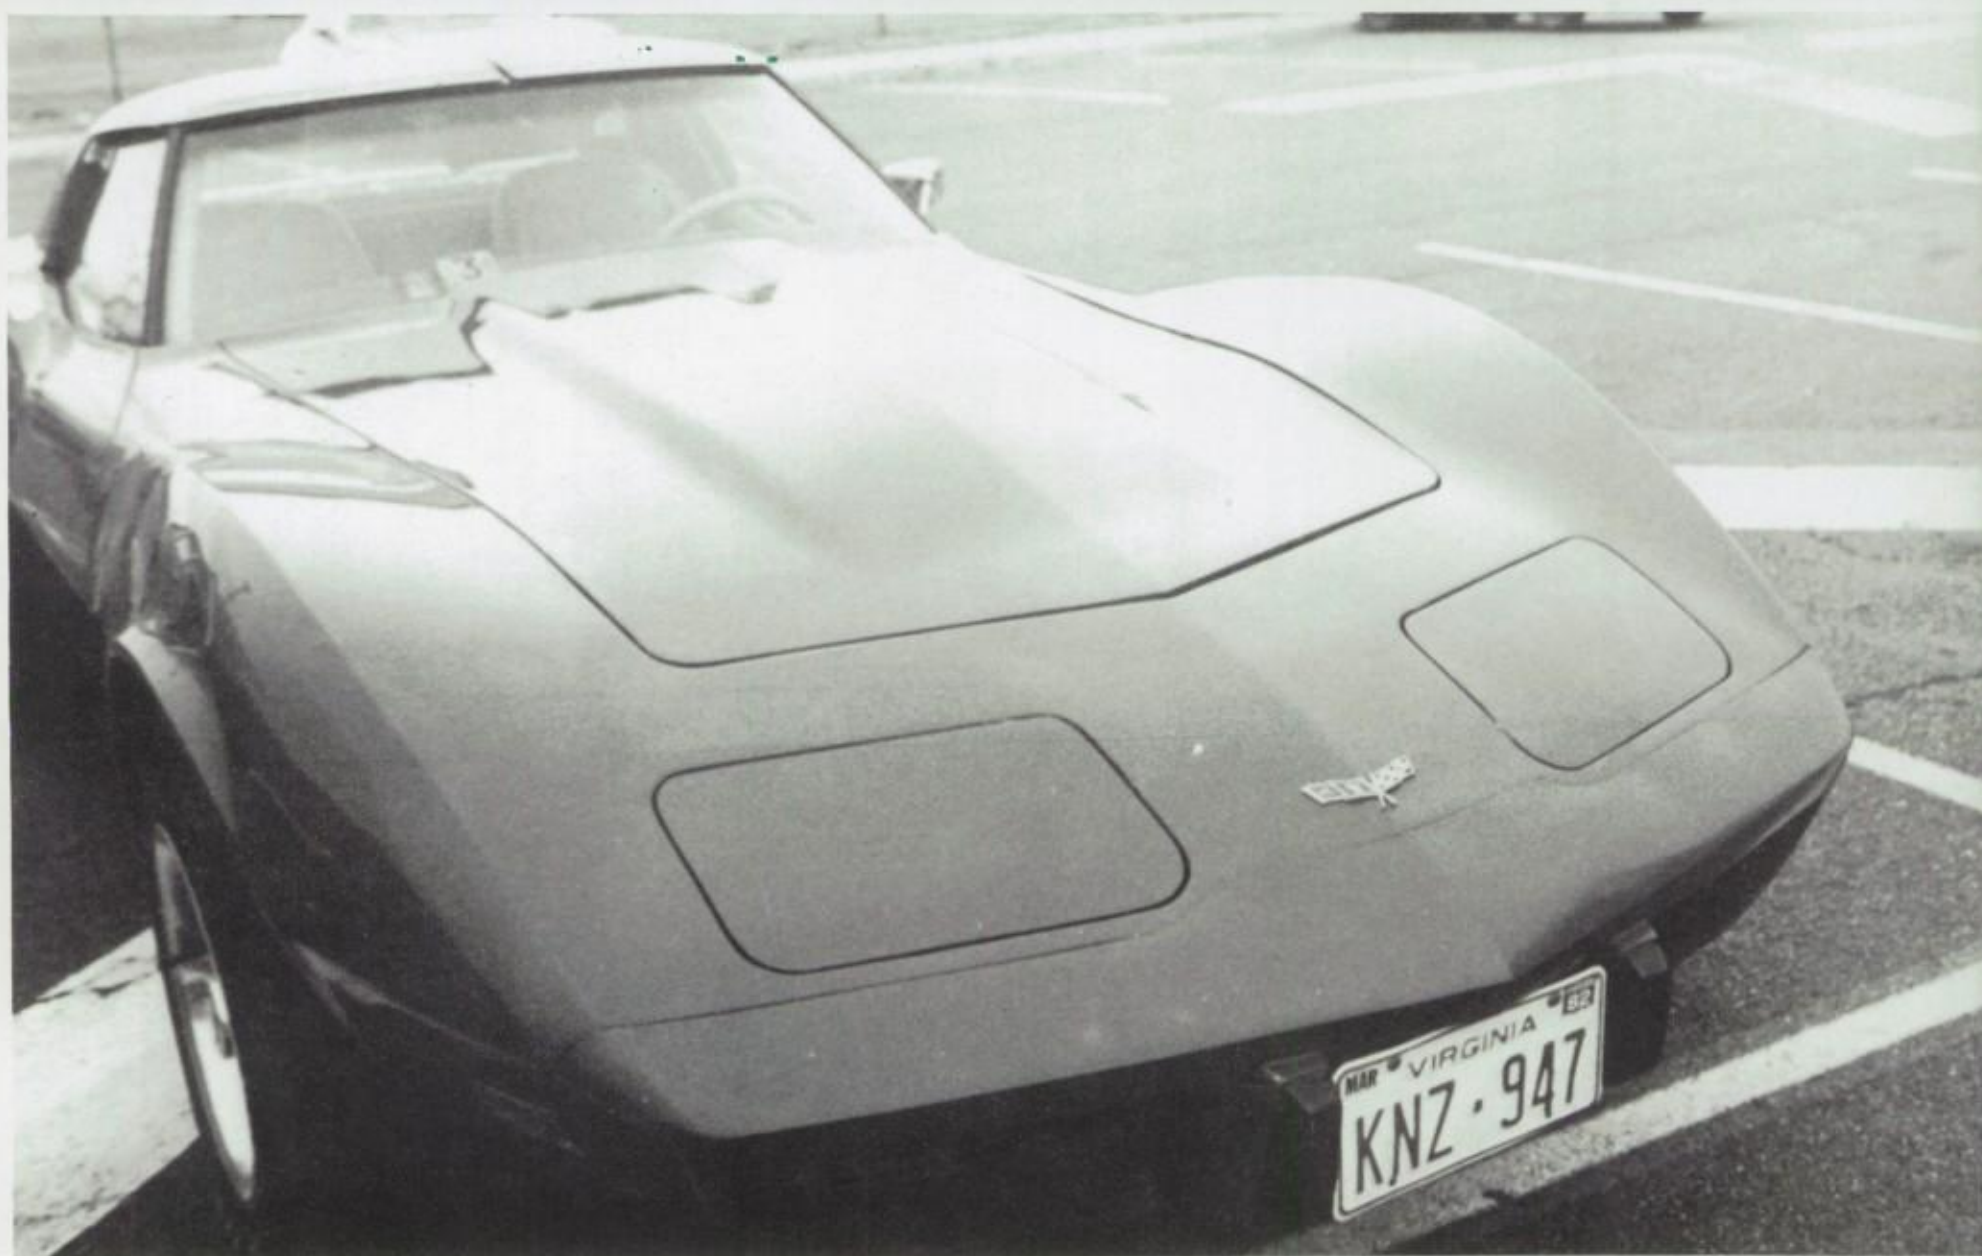

Henry Siddeley, in his ski jacket, braves the cold in the senior court.

Although JoAnn White has her own car, she still gets chauffeured to school along with her brother Kenny.

Most students drive cars or trucks to school. Clint Henderson is the only person that drives a motorcycle.

Any person at Broad Run would feel lucky to have any form of car. Junior Collette Brosky is exceptionally lucky — she shares a Corvette with her mother.

Most underclassmen, such as Tim Hyatt, Patty Oswald, and Catrina Foster, have no choice but to ride the bus.

Getting There

Next to Christmas and high school graduation, the best thing that could happen to a teenager was to get a driver's license. This involved quite a lot of work. First he had to take a test to get his learner's permit. Secondly, he had to pass Driver's Education in the classroom and then, he had to pass "behind the wheel". After his sixteenth birthday, he could get his license.

But after getting his license came the hard part. The new driver then needed money to buy a car. If he already had a car, he needed money for gas. Since it cost anywhere from $1.20 and up, so he found it necessary to get a job. When he finally got a job, and got enough money to buy the car of his dreams, it was not always what he expected.

Melissa Brown worked for her car. She had a Formula. Bill Spence, who had a Homet, also worked for his car. Then there were the more fortunate ones who got their cars from their parents. Carl Forrester, a junior, got his new Camaro even before he got his license. Steve Jones's "green machine" was given to him by his grandfather. Kenny Compton had an old Ford that belonged to his dad, but he drove it whenever he wanted.

The people who couldn't seem to save enough money found it easier to ride with friends, or even ride the bus.

Don't forget dem
bike rides!

Senior Mark Williamson warms up his car for the ride home.

This is one of the many types of transportation used at Broad Run.

Besides graduation each year, what was the vacation that was most looked forward to? Christmas, of course. Without a doubt, this year was extremely hectic the week before the vacation. Teachers had lesson plans, while classes and clubs planned their various "cultural experiences" for Friday.

The week was made even worse by the cancellation of school on Wednesday, due to the first significant snowfall of the year. This snowfall caused many students to have to make up missed tests and quizzes before they could have their cultural experiences. Needless to say, there were many low grades this week! The snow also made everyone anxious to get out of school and be with their loved ones.

Finally, Friday came. Students and teachers alike waited impatiently for the 3:15 bell. The time had come ... No more school for 2 weeks!

Unbound delegate Jan Cain quickly delivers her candy canes before class. Unbound sold candy canes with private messages attached on the week preceeding Christmas.

Senior Scott Gross prepares to kill the defenseless snowman. He broke the piñata with two hits, and everyone in Miss Helm's Spanish 3 class got some candy.

Director and drama sponsor Mrs. Aurelia Brackett rushes props to the cast of Blithe Spirit.

After the seance, Charles (Tim Hyatt) says his farewell to Madame Arcati (Lori Lietzan).

On opening night the cast returns to the stage for a curtain call. They are Alaina Finnegan, Lori Lietzan, Jan Cain, Tim Hyatt, Patti Weaver, Pat Cardine, and Barbara Anderson.

Passing out onstage, Madame Arcati (Lori Lietzan) rehearses a part of the first act. Around the table are Patti Weaver, Pat Cardine, and Barbara Anderson.

Assistant director Marty Sullivan and props coordinator Sabrina Murawski critique a rehearsal of the play.

Psychic Phenomenon

A seance was held, and a woman was brought back from the grave. She then proceeded to murder her ex-husband's wife. Of course all of this occurred during the Drama Department's stage production of Noel Coward's Blithe Spirit. This superb performance was directed by Aurelia Brackett who was assisted by junior Marty Sullivan, and appeared on the evening of December 4 and 5.

This three-act comedy was set entirely in the living room of a condominium. Charles, played by junior Tim Hyatt, and his second wife Ruth, played by senior Patti Weaver, owned the condominium. One evening they were entertaining their friends Dr. and Mrs. Bradman, (played by freshman Pat Cardine and sophomore Barbra Anderson). They invited a clairvoyant — Madame Arcati, (played by sophomore Lori Lietzen), who performed a seance for the four friends. During this seance, Charles' first wife Elvira returned from the grave, but became visible only to Charles. This ghost, played by junior Jan Cain devised a plan to murder her husband so that they might live together forever in the after life. Her plan naturally backfired and she ended up killing Ruth.

This play set the scene for mischief and embarrassment for poor Charles, who was caught in the middle of the entire scenario.

Among the technical crew and backstage personnel were James Owens, Sabrina Murawski, Michele Russell, Kari Weaver, Natalie Parsons, Lisa Shapiro, and many other students and parents who set aside much time to aid this production.

Sending Mrs. Bradman (Alaina Finnagan) into a deep trance, Madame Arcati (Lori Lietzen) waves her hand in front of her subject.

Feeling angry after an argument with her husband, Ruth (Patti Weaver) stares thoughtfully into space.

Marching during half-time, the band shows off their new uniforms.

Organizations

Schools can't produce well-rounded people if the only thing offered to students is an academic education. This is where clubs come in. Clubs prepare students for the world by giving them a chance to participate in and learn useful skills of organizing, preparing, and decision making.

Clubs bring students together. It is vital that people who work get along with their co-workers, or the project or office would collapse. Members who are responsible are valuable assets to an organization. Meeting on Friday mornings isn't always sufficient time to organize an activity; therefore, many club members stay after school and come before school to finish their work.

Basic fund raisers are many clubs' main activities. Clubs raise money to obtain materials needed for their activities. For instance, the language clubs raise money for a trip at the end of the year by selling tee-shirts, having bake sales, and having the "Dating Game".

Officers, elected by club members, actually run the club. They learn leadership and responsibility, but the club members are important to the club too. All students involved in clubs contribute to making the club the best. When our clubs are the best around, then our school must be, too.

A Bilingual Bunch

Did you ever feel that you deserved to have a 'slave serve you for a day? Well, your wish could have come true on November 13, thanks to the French and Spanish clubs. The two clubs combined their talents to produce a slave auction. Thirty-nine members from both clubs were sold to the highest bidder.

Members of these clubs were busy throughout the year. The Spanish Club sold spirit links during Homecoming week. The French Club sold foreign language T-shirts.

The Dating Game was again co-sponsored by the clubs in February.

Both clubs liked to give members a chance to taste the culture of their respective countries. Spanish Club members could be found in a Mexican restaurant in the spring. A trip to a French restaurant in both the fall and the spring was on the agenda for members of the French Club.

These two clubs have always been active, both separately and together, and this year was no exception.

French Club officers Shawn Daly, Caitlin Lietzan, and Steve Jones attempt to keep the meeting under control.

Listening intently to both old and new business in a Spanish Club meeting are Katy Koehler and Arlene Fierstien.

Many people are needed to help sell spirit links during lunch. Today it's Susie Pender's turn.

Mixed Cuisine

Learning about the lifestyle of other countries is part of learning another language. To explore the culture of a foreign land, many joined a language club.

A favorite way to discover a certain country without leaving the U.S. was trying the food of that nation. Both the Latin and German clubs did this. Members went out to several restaurants throughout the year. Both clubs also participated in the International Dinner. This is where foods from different countries were brought by students of each language club.

At the end of the year the Latin Club and German Club went on a trip to Busch Gardens. The two clubs also co-sponsored a fund-raising activity in the gym in the spring.

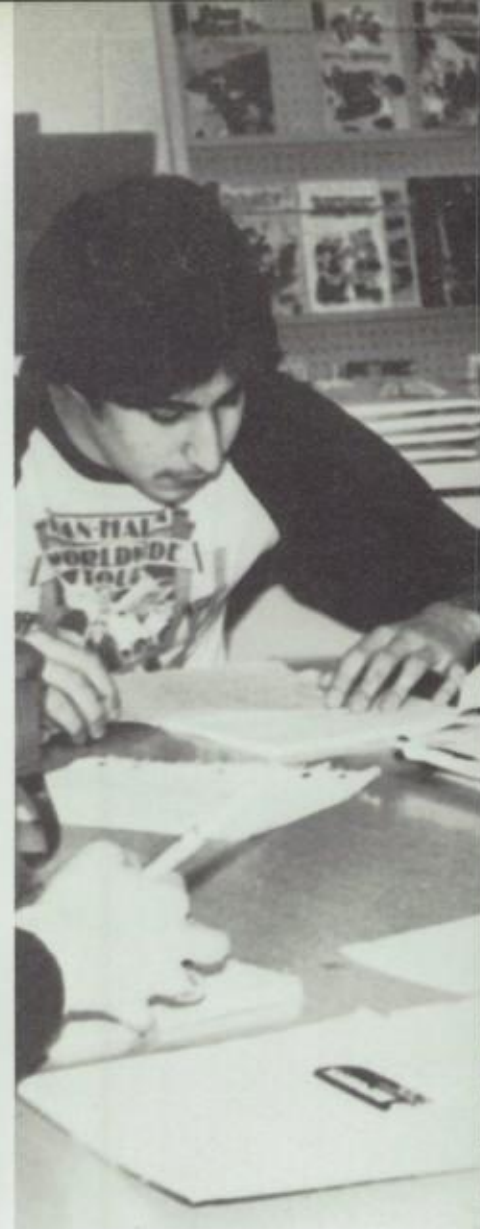

Latin Club president Robin Saville is an important member of the club. She helps organize trips to restaurants and works with the German Club officers to plan their trip to Busch Gardens.

Artistic Excellence

It's an award winning publication! Its design is totally unique! It's full of fantastic art and poetry! It's Unbound!

Unbound has always been a consistent source of pride for our school. This year was no exception. Once again, Unbound received a Trophy Class rating from the Virginia High School League in November. It also received the All-South award from the Southern Interscholastic Press Association for the third year in a row. The award is given to only ten magazines in a seventeen state area. Last but not least, Unbound received an All-Columbian rating from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association in New York City.

Funds to support the magazine were raised by diligent staff members. They sold subscriptions for the spring issue and solicited business patrons. In addition to this, they sold candy canes with messages for Christmas.

Unbound consisted of both a special and a general staff. While the special staff did the actual layout design, the general staff helped with the critiquing of art and literary submissions. General staff members were, as always, picked by teacher recommendations.

Meetings are necessary among Unbound Staff members. This one between Phil LoPresti, Mrs. Norma Bomarth, and John Havener is about layout.

Everyone's opinion is asked for when new submissions are being critiqued. This time it's Jan Cain's and Laura Sherman's turn.

Time, Talent, and Tears

Late nights, flat Pepsi, and stale Doritos are just some of the hardships endured by a yearbook staff member in order to produce a yearbook that the students of our school will be proud of. The past two years have been times for making much needed improvements. Last year's staff produced a book that received a second place rating from both the Virginia High School League and the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. This year's staff was a dedicated and hard working group who gave their all to pay off past debts and make the deadlines. Growth in both size and experience were contributing factors to the success of the staff.

Contrary to popular belief, the yearbook is not supported by county funds. Money was raised by staff members through selling advertisements to local businessmen, soliciting patrons, and the sale of carnations for Valentine's Day.

Without the guidance of our illustrious editors, Caitlin Lietzan and Christy Lentile, this yearbook would have been an impossibility.

Despite efforts to get along well, disagreements do arise between Judy Cannaday and Sonya Stewart.

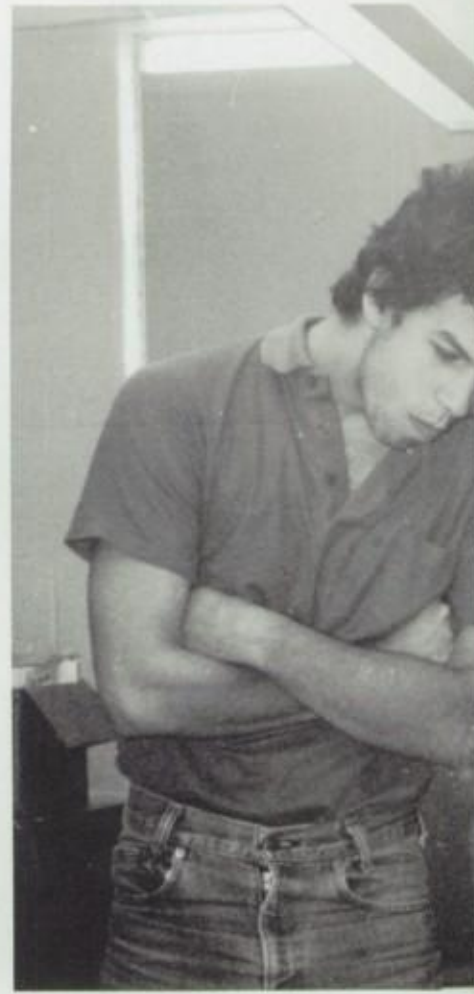

After finishing a piece of cake, student life co-editor, Debbie Hammond, gets the last of the icing from her fingers.

After a long search Debbie Frankenberg is rewarded with the discovery of one of our frequently misplaced rulers.

Reporting the Facts

Reporting news happenings both inside and outside the school was the job of our school newspaper, The Spartan. A return to the original format and a reduction in price were among the changes made this year.

The reduction in price was a result of the termination of county funding. Since The Spartan had to finance itself, the price of each issue was reduced fifteen cents to boost sales. Ads were sold to area businesses. Funds were also raised by numerous bake sales, a rock concert during an October activity period, and the sale of Christmas wishes.

Another change for The Spartan was the return to the old format. The general opinion of the magazine style was not good. It was hard to read. In addition to changing the format, The Spartan went back to the Loudoun Times-Mirror for printing. In the previous year Vo-tech students had printed the paper. This proved to be a mistake because of time considerations.

It seems that the biggest change for the Spartan this year was the all new staff. Led by sponsor Elaine Gubbins and Editor-in-chief John Sullivan, the young journalists produced a very informative and interesting publication.

Dollars for Scholars

The rising price of college tuition forced many students to search for financial aid. Two organizations whose primary goal was to raise money to fund scholarships were the National Honor Society and the Student Council Association.

NHS raised the majority of their funds through the sale of Val-o-grams on Valentine's Day. Val-o-grams were written, spoken, or sung messages to the person of one's choice. They were delivered during classes by NHS members. Dues were also collected to add to the scholarship fund.

NHS awarded two scholarships. All senior NHS members were eligible for them. Recipients were voted on by the junior members of the NHS.

SCA had various ways to raise money for their scholarships. An ongoing activity was running the concession stand during all home basketball games. Members were all asked to volunteer their time to sell hot dogs, cokes, popcorn, and candy. Funds were also raised by sponsoring a movie for the student body in the spring.

There were many factors involved in deciding who would receive the various scholarships. Seniors who were members of the SCA could apply for the SCA scholarships. Applicants were required to submit a resume to the SCA. The application included activities for SCA and the reasons they wished to receive the scholarship. SCA gave away three $200 scholarships and one $500 scholarship.

Listening intently to Susan Fearnow as she discusses the running of the concession stand are Betty Hayes, and Sheila Addison.

Much time went into preparing for a debate. Freshman Charlton Dunn checks the files on this year's topic, sex education.

Many members of the Drama Club participated in the production of Blithe Spirit. This scene is between Barbra Anderson and Patti Weaver.

On Stage

There were many people who enjoyed performing for an audience. We all saw the actors and actresses on stage, but there were other performers as well. Members of the Debate team and Forensics team, as well as those in the Drama Club, were called upon to perform.

The Debate team was faced with many adverse conditions. A new coach, Mr. Neil Dineen, and a fairly new team all added to the difficulties. Despite a lack of experience, all members had a successful season. Freshmen Jim Reinhart and Charlton Dunn won several first place awards for the negative novice division. The topic for this debate season was sex education. In a typical debate meet, each debater takes part in four debates. This is why a debate meet takes all day.

Another organization where students could express themselves was the Forensics team. There were several categories to compete in. In poetry, prose, and original oratory competition, students practiced for three months on the selections they were reading. For extemporaneous speaking competition, one was given a choice of three topics and thirty minutes to prepare a speech on the day of the contest.

The Drama Club was a home for lovers of the stage. Performers as well as backstage helpers were encouraged to join. Many members were involved in the fall production of Blithe Spirit. Cast parties were sponsored by the Drama Club.

Members of the singing groups joined together to sing the Star Spangled Banner at the Homecoming pep rally.

Singing Out

We had many talented singers, and they had many opportunities to show off their talents. There were three groups of singers: The Treble Choir, Varsity Chorus, and the Spartan Singers. With all of these choices, every singer had a chance to perform.

In order to become a member of the Spartan Singers, one had to audition for Mrs. Michele Lacy, director of the choral department. Spartan Singers went to neighboring schools, such as Seneca Ridge Middle School and Ashburn Elementary, to perform for the students.

Because of the large interest in singing by girls of the school there was a Treble Choir. This group was formed to keep from having too many female voices in the Spartan Singers.

Membership in the Varsity Chorus was open to anyone who enjoyed singing. This group consisted mostly of freshmen. One of its purposes was to give experience to those singers who had never been involved with a high school musical organization.

Some members of the Spartan Singers received regional recognition. Kim Perry, Alecia Grzech, and Kathy Hardin went to regional competition.

Much practice was necessary for the Spartan Singers to prepare for concerts. Sherry Exley and Kathy Hardin practice during fourth period.

At the end of the Christmas concert the Treble Choir, the Varsity Chorus, and the Spartan Singers all joined together for a song.

A Little Night Music

What would a football game have been like if there was no halftime show? What if there had been no fight song played throughout the game? Football games just wouldn't have been the same without music. For this music we have the marching band to thank.

Much time and dedication was necessary to perfect the drill and formations that band director George Phillip coordinated. There was a variety of numbers played including "Ghost Riders" and "On Broadway." "On Broadway" featured the flag corps in a chorus line-type drill. Another number featured majorette Joy Broderick. When the weather was good she twirled fire batons. Duane Slyder played "The Sailor Man" on the mallots.

Many parents who wanted to help improve the band gave their time and talents. Mr. Tatu helped the drummers with their timing. Precision drumming was a very important factor for a professional sounding band. Mrs. Tatu helped teach the flag corps precision marching. After all of this behind the scenes work was completed, a half-time show was born.

The band turns their section of the bleachers into a very spirited place.

Measuring Up

Although the marching band was seen most often on the football field, they were very busy throughout the entire year. Both individual and group competition played a big part in the life of a band member. The band marched in the James Madison University Homecoming Parade in November. They received a second place award for this effort.

They also marched in the Norfolk Azalea Festival in April. Since this was a weekend trip, much money had to be raised by band members. They accomplished this by selling raffle tickets on a side of beef. The band also asked for donations at many homes in the Sugarland Run or after they marched in a parade celebrating Sugarland Run's tenth anniversary.

On the individual level, band members competed for openings in District and regional bands. Charlotte Graham, Duane Slyder, Robbie Moore, and Kathy Donaldson won positions in the regional band.

Getting in some last minute pre-parade practice is Duane Slyder, Tim Nichols, and Noreen Petty.

Many freshmen were in Beginning Band. They performed at the Christmas concert.

Exhausted from a long day of marching, Pat Torres sits down to rest.

During the Christmas concert the band played part of the Nutcracker. Freshmen Tish Keller dances part of the Sugarplum Fairy.

The band marched in several parades throughout the year. This is the beginning of the parade celebrating Sugarland Run's tenth anniversary.

Much work went into perfecting the flag corps routine. Captain Julie Boyd helps Donna Johnson with the timing of the routine.

Working Together

Having knowledge of the business world is important today, and many students learned about business in school. Two clubs provided this opportunity for our students.

Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA) was one of these clubs. DECA participants ran the school store and took a class to learn of marketing and business. Some of the DECA students received early releases so they could learn through first hand experience by having a job.

Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) was a club for students who wished to learn more about the business world.

The club proved to be very active this year. Led by sponsor Mrs. Sheila Funkhouser and president Terry Kent, the members built a float for Homecoming. During the Thanksgiving season FBLA sold pies to raise money in order to fund trips to state-wide conferences. Also for the holidays, members took baskets of food to needy families in the community.

Organizations such as DECA and FBLA serve a very useful function. They have helped to prepare many students for life after graduation.

Upon their arrival to Distributive Education Class, Susie Pender helps Sherry Jenkins with her coat.

Selling pies was a fund raiser for FBLA. Patty Daniels and Joi Pederson help distribute the pies.

Small Clubs Grow

Students seemed to take a greater interest in school activities this year. This was shown by the increased memberships enjoyed by several clubs. Among these clubs were the New Life Club and the Future Homemakers of America.

The New Life Club met every Friday and offered students the opportunity to "make new friends, discuss their problems, and share ideas with each other." Said member Rita Wilson, "the club tried to bring Christian people together." The Club sold tickets for a drawing with a jar of candy as the prize for the winner. The funds raised by this went to help defray the cost of seeing a concert.

The FHA, under the direction of Mrs. Echols, was open to anyone interested in home economics. Bake sales were a main source of income for FHA. Money made from these sales was used to fund a trip to a statewide FHA conference.

The Art of the Game

Athletes express their talents on the playing field, but what about the people who wish to express their mental talents? Well, some of these people could be found in the Art and Chess clubs.

Students in the Chess Club met during Friday Activity periods to improve upon their skills. A good chess player must plan his strategy at least ten moves in advance. This takes both talent and concentration. One could even say that playing chess well is an art.

Members of the club attended tournaments throughout the year, including an inter-county tournament held at Loudoun County High School on December 12.

Students interested in supporting the Arts had the Art Club available to them. Under the direction of Mrs. Chloe Wentz, Bobby Fulk, and Becky Dillman the Art Club was never dull. One Activity this year was the production of a second place Homecoming float. In order to raise money for the Art department, the club promoted a Christmas ornament sale and showed animated films.

In the Art Club, many students, such as Mark Knezevich, Mandy Wettstein, and Lisa Price learn to improve their artistic skills.

Signs professing spirit were commonly seen in the halls. Stephanie Burwick puts some made by the Jr. Booster Club in the gym hall.

By participating in Girls' Cross Country and Track, Tammy Fleming earned her letter. This qualified her for membership in the Monogram Club.

Sports Minded

Somehow, sports usually found their way into the lives of every student. Some participated in team sports in the name of the school, such as the girls in the Monogram Club did. Others, like Ski Club members, participated in sports outside the school. There were also those who supported the school teams and promoted spirit in general by joining the Jr. Booster Club.

The Monogram Club consisted of girls who had lettered in a Varsity sport. The girls gave funds to pay for an ice machine for use by the athletic teams and to supply ice for the concession stand.

The Ski Club was an organization for those students who wished to ski with their friends from school. There were problems with organization at first. The first scheduled trip was cancelled due to lack of interest. Subsequent trips were planned for Ski Liberty, where the members skied at discount group rates.

Members of Jr. Boosters helped to provide a source of spirit for students. They raised funds by selling T-shirts and holding a Spring Festival. It was a carnival-type event where many clubs had booths. There was a dunking booth which was very popular. There were also games for students to participate in and food and crafts to buy. Students who went got to miss part of their afternoon classes.

Fortunately, this is not a casualty of excessive homework. Mr. Randy Poland and Charlotte Graham are moving the mannequin that is used in the school store.

Individuals

Faces, faces and more faces. In this section you will see the individuals that make our school special. These are our stars, our athletes, our brains, our freaks, our preps, our rednecks, and our normal guys.

We learn from others' differences. These groups provide for a well rounded school. The school needs each individual's talents to be outstanding.

However, students are not the only people who make up our school. Teachers, secretaries, custodians, and the people who work in the cafeteria are all special, also. Without them our school would not exist.

The students and the various people that make up our school are all unique.

Best Friends

"Best friends" are words one often hears in high school. But what do they really mean?

Friends stick together through the ups and downs. Friends don't play roles; they like each other just as they are.

Being with one's best friend was an important part of the day at BR. Kim Little said of her friendship with Tania Piotrowski, "We don't have any classes together, so we try and see each other between classes.

We wait after classes for each other."

Sometimes a friendship develops in a very short time. This was the case when Amy Berry came to Broad Run from North Carolina this year. In just a few weeks, she and Tammy Howser became good friends, and according to Amy, "it's like we've always known each other."

Horsing Around

Do you have lots of extra time? Are you considerate and loving? Or just filthy rich?

If you answered yes to at least one of these questions, then you should own a horse.

Horses cost anywhere from $10.00 for a "Mr. Ed", on up to thousands of dollars.

One freshman Tammy Hayes, says it costs her $50 a month to board her horse, Summer, at Potomac Valley Appaloosa stables. She rides three days a week in the winter and six days a week in the summer. Tammy says a good owner has to be familiar with stable management, how to ride, the equipment needed for care, the illnesses and cures for a horse, how to train, and different types of feed.

Dawn Chambers says it costs about $3.00 for a ball of hay, which will last a horse about a week.

A true lover of horses, Mrs. Wentz, gives her description of horse. She says, "They have four legs and a tail, they eat oats, and have pointy ears."

Another major part of horse care is just giving the horse a little bit of T.L.C. Aside from all the money and time involved, a horse needs love!

A horse is more than a pet; it's a friend. Shelly Watson stands with her friend Sandy.

Just You, Me, and Dad?

Most freshmen and many sophomores have been in this situation. Transportation for dates is a very large problem. Most of the time there are only three choices.

One choice is double dating with someone who does drive, which seems to be the most popular form of transportation. Another option is having the parents drive. Unfortunately, this can be rather embarrassing when it comes time for the goodnight kiss, unless, of course, the parents are very understanding. The third and most popular choice is when a date says, "Meet me at the Towncenter Theater at 8:00. Buy the tickets and I'll pay you back later." Somehow, the idea of "It's going to be a long night" stands out in this situation. Debbie Bergin, Michele Ferris, and Todd Gibson think the first choice is the best choice.

Couples without transportation, like Sonia Barrow and Darryl Thornton, meet in the halls between classes.

Grounded

Does it seem to you that half your life is spent being grounded? When you aren't allowed to use the phone or watch T.V., doesn't it seem like one day takes three years? If so, don't worry; you're normal!

Most people hate being grounded. There is never anything to do, except clean your room or watch T.V.

Some restrictions are very severe, however. Missy Payne was once grounded for six months, and she said, "I wasn't allowed to do anything or go anywhere. But I got off after a week and a half."

A person can get grounded for big reasons, like staying out 3 hours longer than allowed or failing 5 out of 6 classes. But a few students get grounded for minor crimes, such as talking on the phone too long. Whatever the reason, being grounded seems to be a natural part of being a teenager.

Since being grounded means you can't leave the house, Kerri Aikens finds this is a good time to practice her culinary skills.

Murphy's Law

No one is exempt; everyone has one. It catches the good, the bad, and the in-betweens. It is the day where everything goes wrong — the terrible day.

Edie Fogel's bad day was, "When I missed the bus." "When all three bathrooms are taken before I have to go to school," complained Doug Brown. Nita Fritzman's definition was "When you fight with your parents and they want you to bring your grades up. Then you bring them up, and they still want better." Mark Knezevich detests "being late for the first three periods."

Being late to class and dropping a notebook isn't the way to start the day, as Shane Runner discovers.

On the first day of school, Joe Lamb aided by his friends, tries to find his first class.

How Will I Ever Find My Way Around?

For most Freshmen, coming to school on August 26, 1981 was scary. It was their first day of high school. Almost all the freshmen came to the orientation at Broad Run last spring. At that time they were given a tour of the school and met some of the faculty. But as Terry Partlow remarked, "The school seems different when there're so many people walking in the halls."

There was a fear of being beaten up by the upper classmen. But the older students did a good job of helping and answering questions. Like Mary Carothers, a lot of people got lost, and Mary didn't find her locker until the end of the day.

License to

A little piece of paper on one side and an unflattering picture on the other comprises one of the most important documents that a teenager can receive: a driver's license.

The first step in acquiring a license was earning a learner's permit. The process for getting this consisted of several things. First, the person must have been at that magical age of fifteen years and eight months. He then took two tests — an eye test and a written test. The written test was multiple choice, and each question was accompanied by a diagram. The eye test was to read a standard eye chart. Many people thought these tests were hard, but, as Jenny Chambers said, "It was extremely easy if you study the material you were given."

If he passed the two tests, the prospective driver was then required to pay a $3.00 fee. Finally, he received that yellow slip of paper known as a learner's permit. For most students in Sugarland,

Freedom

Ashburn, or Arcola, this all took place at the Division of Motor Vehicles in Leesburg. The Fairfax branch of the DMV was the location of the test for many students in Sterling, Chantilly, and the southern end of the county.

Even after receiving his learner's permit, he still wasn't free to drive on his own. In order to drive legally, the learner had to have a licensed driver, who was at least eighteen years old, in the seat next to him.

Next, the learner took classroom driver's education and then behind the wheel instruction. After successfully completing these courses and reaching his sixteenth birthday, the eager future driver was eligible to get a license. An on-the-road test with a representative of the DMV and a payment of the $9.00 fee were all that stood between the learner and the freedom of the road. Once these conditions were satisfied, the former learner was a full-fledged driver!

Bowl Fever

An excessive amount of football can be dangerous to your health. This was the feeling voiced by many people around the holiday season, the season of college bowl games and professional play-off games. "Football is a holiday sport," said junior Tim Belcher. This obviously was the feeling of many others also. The Orange Bowl closed out the college football season with Clemson defeating Nebraska, thus earning the title of #1 college team in the nation. Even though this game had the most effect on the college scene, the Rose Bowl, according to Variety magazine, received a 22nd place rating for the week it was shown. Traditionally the Rose Bowl, though less important, has been more popular with viewing audiences.

Even more popular than the college games were the pro games. The final play-off games proved very profitable to CBS. The final AFC conference game was the defeat of the San Diego Chargers by the Cincinnati Bengals. The NFC conference championship was between the Dallas Cowboys, with the 49'ers emerging victorious.

The entire pro-football season was all a warm up to the ultimate game in football — the Super Bowl. The bonus money and the Super Bowl rings went to the San Francisco 49'ers as they defeated the Cincinnati Bengals.

Homework was a pain, but finding time to do it was even harder for Tammy Parsons.

The thrill of volleyball is gone for Donna Darby.

The Thrill Is Gone

Get up at 7:30. Get dressed. Trudge out to the bus stop. Get to school. Go to homeroom. Start classes. Lunch. Go home. Where will it all end?

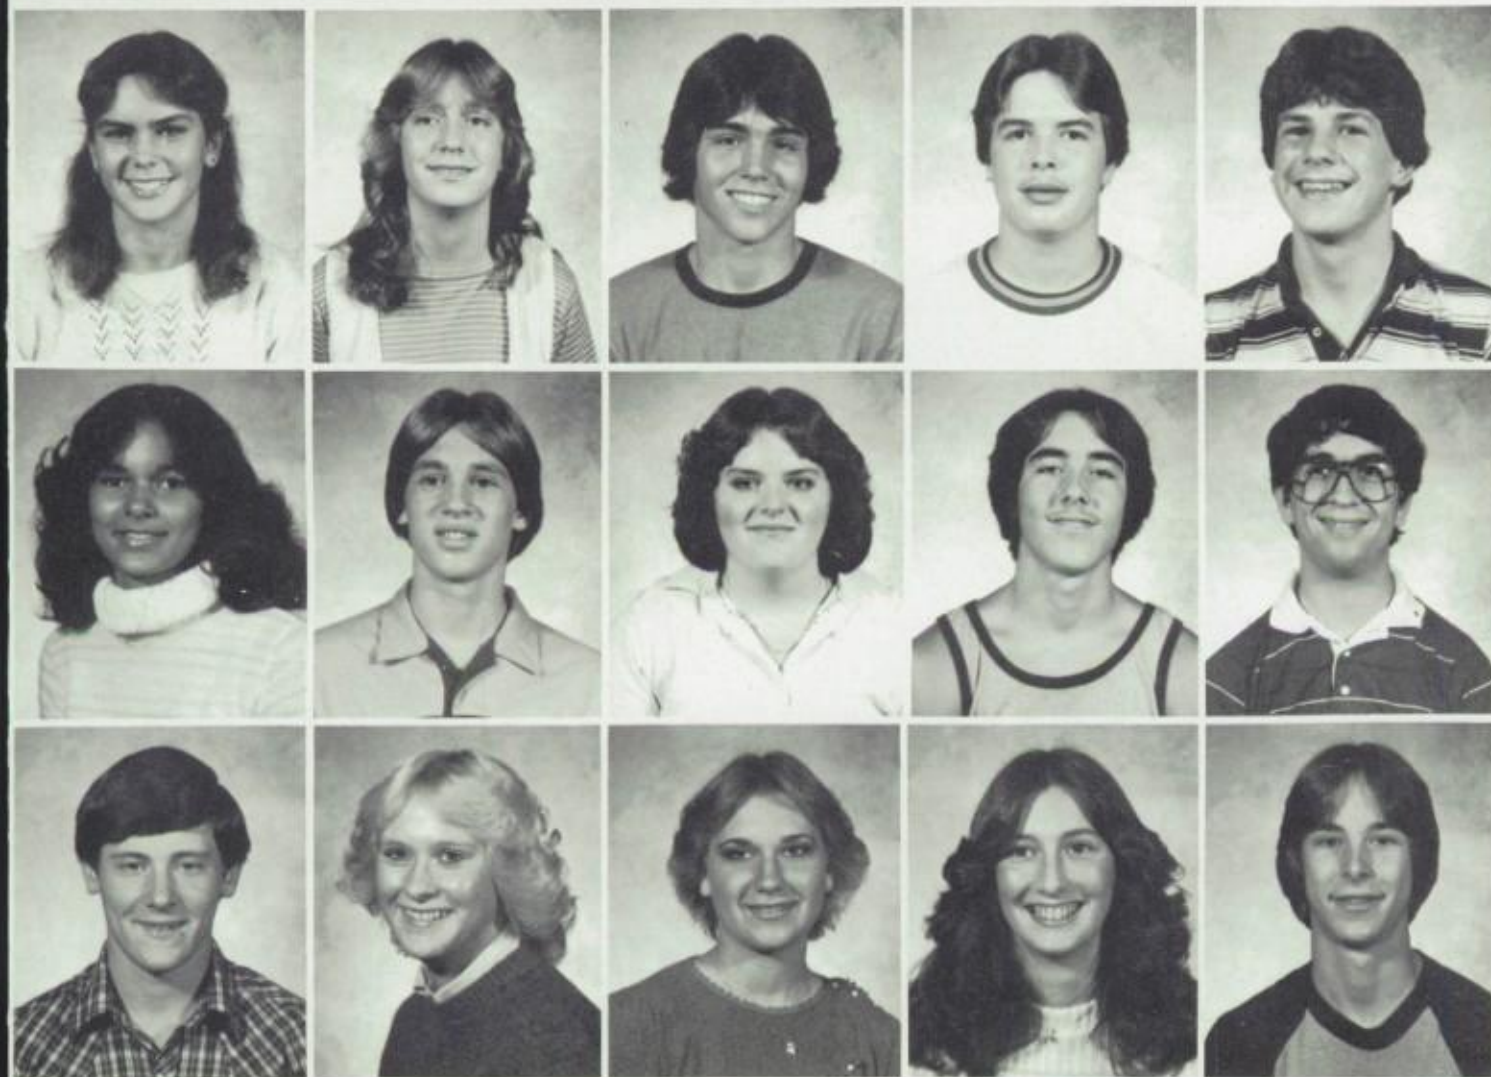

When several sophomores were asked how they felt about being in high school, the answers were almost unanimous. As Tammy Howser put it, "It's not new anymore. The day has become routine. You go to school and then you go home." Donna Stewart added, "After basketball season is over, I do what everyone else does . . . homework."

Even though the sophomores thought school was boring, many of their last year's teachers thought it was attributed to their growing up. Not so many childish pranks were played in class. Mrs. Wentz said, "They are maturing and are no longer kids. The kids are going through the transitional stage of adolescence."

Perhaps maturity takes the excitement out of school. Or maybe the fact that high school was no longer a new experience dampened the fun. A likely explanation, however, was that even after completing the sophomore year, graduation was still two long years down the road.

Let It Snow, Let It Snow, Let It Snow!

It's 6:30 AM. The alarm clock rings. You look out the window and . . . could it be? Is it? Yes! It's SNOW!

Looking out the window, the first thing to come to most people's minds is that inevitable question, "Do we have school today?" The next action is to turn on the radio to WAGE, and the eagerly-awaited announcement is heard:

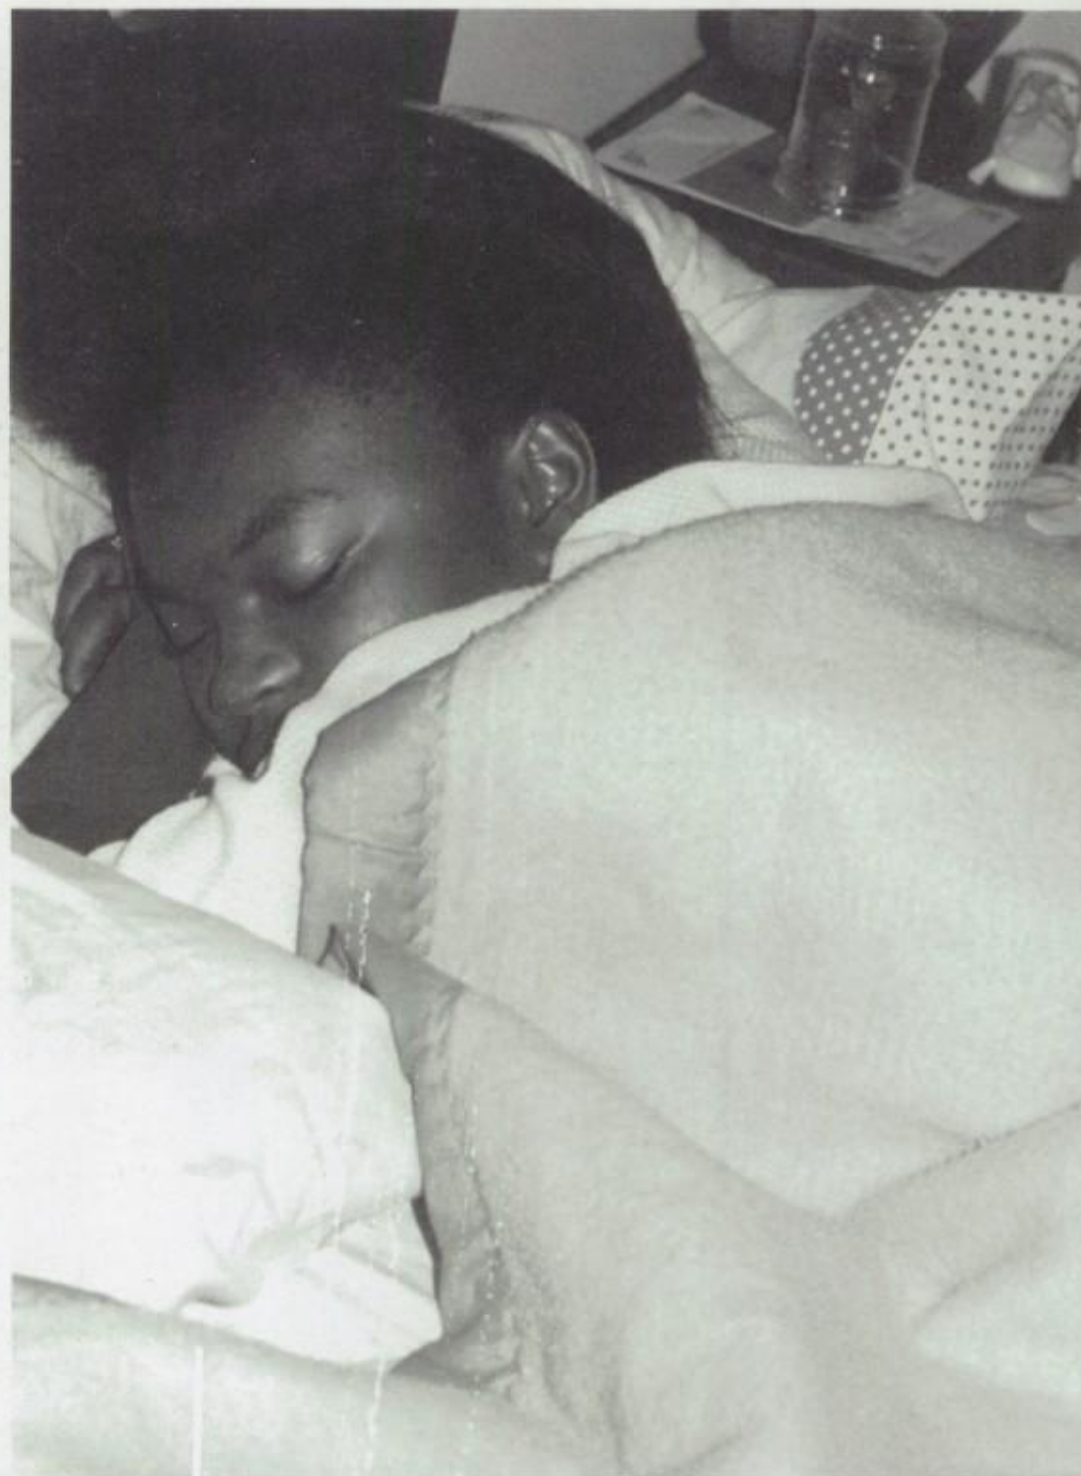

"The following school districts are closed today because of snow: Fairfax County, Prince William County, Clarke County, Montgomery County, Loudoun County . . ."

What did these words mean to you? To most Broad Run students they meant more time to stay in bed and sleep, or maybe just a chance to goof off. The first snow day was an unexpected surprise; two days before Christmas vacation, most of the area was covered with four to six inches of snow.

Staying home meant different things to different people. To Jennifer Butts, it meant having a neighborhood snowball fight. Mic Platt yelled at little kids to get their sleds off his property. Andy Kline played TV games, and Stacey Cooper had friends over to watch their favorite soaps. Most everyone, however, spent at least a little time praying for more snow!

It's 11:15 AM on a Wednesday, and Donna Stewart is glad it's a snow day.

P.E. classes in the new gym keep Dawn out of the cold in the winter.

When you are on crutches at Broad Run, you have a helper. Karen Topping's helper is Marci Sullivan, both freshmen.

Walking

What has three legs and hobbles around for four weeks? The answer is anyone on crutches. This year, the Spartans had their share of these invalid beasts. Among these were students and teachers alike.

Many of the injuries were related to sports accidents. Alease Brown and her sister Melissa were both on crutches for a good part of the girls basketball season. Wendy Hoover and Beth Dacey were also on crutches in the fall and missed much action on the girls basketball team. Even Mr. Kazmierczak, who pulled his Achilles tendon in August, did so playing sports — volleyball. Shawn Daly hurt his knee early in the wrestling season and was unable to participate.

But some of our "walking wounded" received their injuries out of school. Wendy Barnes, who spent the fall with her knee in a brace, did recover in time to become a Spartan gymnast. Ms. Guenterberg, suffering from a recurring leg problem, hobbled around in the fall following an operation. Teresa Socorso hurt her hip in the fall when she slipped and fell at her home.

If you've never been on crutches, you might think they're fun and that they attract attention. But anyone who has been on crutches will tell you, "It's the pits!" "There's nothing worse than being injured and not being able to play sports," said one athletic Spartan. "It's so frustrating!"

Most teachers don't approve of class interruptions during the day. However, on Mrs. Hershman's good days she doesn't mind students such as Jeff Hawkes waving to a friend.

Keeping Things Going

Finally, females in the locker room! It happened occasionally, because the Spartans had girls as the managers instead of guys. These managers were Susan Mora, Beth Keane, Jenny Chambers, and Debbie Hammond.

These girls had a number of odd jobs to do. For example, they carried equipment on and off the field, took water out, and kept track of the first aid supplies. Before games they had to make sure everything was in the medical kit and the tool kit. During the games they stood on the sidelines carrying bottles of cold water for any of the guys who wanted it. These seem like thankless, difficult jobs, but the girls enjoyed their duties.

As with every job, there were times when everything went wrong. Susan Mora said, "My worst experience was when I was knocked into the mud by several players running out of bounds." So, even though the job of being a female football manager might seem glamorous, it has its difficult moments.

Carrying the team's water is just one of the jobs of a manager, as Dorraine Lee finds out.

Anxiously waiting for their rings are Greg Mason and Orvall Orr.

Strength in Unity

Turn my ring! This expression was heard many times when juniors first received their class rings in the fall. Turning the ring 83 times symbolized the year the junior graduates. The last person to turn the ring is required to give the owner a kiss.

Much excitement and anxiety was felt when the day came for ordering rings, because this was the first sign that graduation wasn't centuries away anymore.

Juniors had four choices for the kind of metal they wanted for their rings. Among the favorites were yellow and white gold, but because of the spiraling costs of the precious metal, two alloys were also offered as choices. Ultrium was introduced last year, and this year yellow ultrium was added.

When it came to choosing the color of the stone, the juniors had a wide selection. Aquamarine and emerald were two examples of birthstones, which were very popular choices.

Among the extras a student could add to his ring were sculptured palm side, name engraved on the inside of the band, a cut top, and sunburst under the stone. These extras cost about $7.00.

The total ring costs varied. Some people escaped with fairly inexpensive rings costing around $70.00, while others spent much more. Many rings ran over $100.00, and Ben Dettwiler spent over $180.00 on his. Because of its larger size, a male's ring was considerably more expensive than the female's.

Juniors paid a down payment of $30.00. On December 11 juniors picked up and made the final payments on their rings. After a short wait in line, Katie Cardine, Rhonda Campbell, and Robbie Grant have their turn.

Before the Formals

Every year, right around the second week in May, the juniors and seniors put on their tuxedos and formal dresses, polish their shoes, and parade off to the Broad Run High Prom.

For the first time, the prom was held in the gymnasium last year. A formal dance in a gymnasium sounds anything but exhilarating. However, anyone who went last year will agree that the decorations and atmosphere created a wonderfully romantic scene for any couple. It was evident that much time and effort went into the preparation of this annual climax to the school year.

This class of 83 put together the prom for this year's seniors in the spring. A special prom decorating committee was formed in January, led by junior class sponsor, Mr. Yankey. It consisted of 20 members who worked long and hard between January and May raising money, selling tickets and decorating the gym.

Several sub-committees were formed such as decoration, publicity, set-up, clean-up, and refreshment committees. The fund raisers consisted of selling T-shirts which read "Mommas don't let your babies grow up to be Patriots."

The committee officers worked diligently at getting a band. They paid for it with money from their previous years of fund raising.

By staging the 1981 prom in the gym, the class of 82 began a tradition. The class of 1983 must now carry out that tradition.

Donating his experience gained from producing last year's prom, Mr. Poland explains the special problems in decorating the gym.

Broad Run's Eagle

On November 8, 1981 junior Mike Bleutge was awarded the honor of Eagle Scout. This is one of the highest honors any young person can achieve. Mike has been involved with scouting for more than nine years. First he spent three years as a Cub Scout. Then he advanced to Weeblos, and finally he joined the Boy Scouts. Mike says, "I love scouting; it's a part of my life."

By receiving his Eagle Scout, Mike has shown many meritable qualities — leadership, responsibility, and an ambition. He feels joining scouting was probably the best decision he could make. "I learn a lot from it." But it doesn't stop here. Mike is eligible for scouting for another year. When he turns eighteen, he can become a leader or assistant leader to keep scouting alive in this area.

At an intense moment, Mary Fochtman and Lisa
Hawthorne show their concern.

The Class of 1983

We, the freshmen class of 1980, were all aware of the hardships and difficulties that we would meet on our four year journey. As we began our high school career, we were afraid, but eager and anxious, to grasp a firm hold in this great institution.

As we lost the title "green freshman" and became "sophisticated sophmores" we began to feel that we were a functioning part of Broad Run. This gave us the determination to make those concerned with us proud. We worked harder than we had ever worked before because we saw the necessity for becoming good citizens in a fast changing world. Under the splendid guidance of our principals and faculty, Broad Run was rapidly progressing, and so were we.

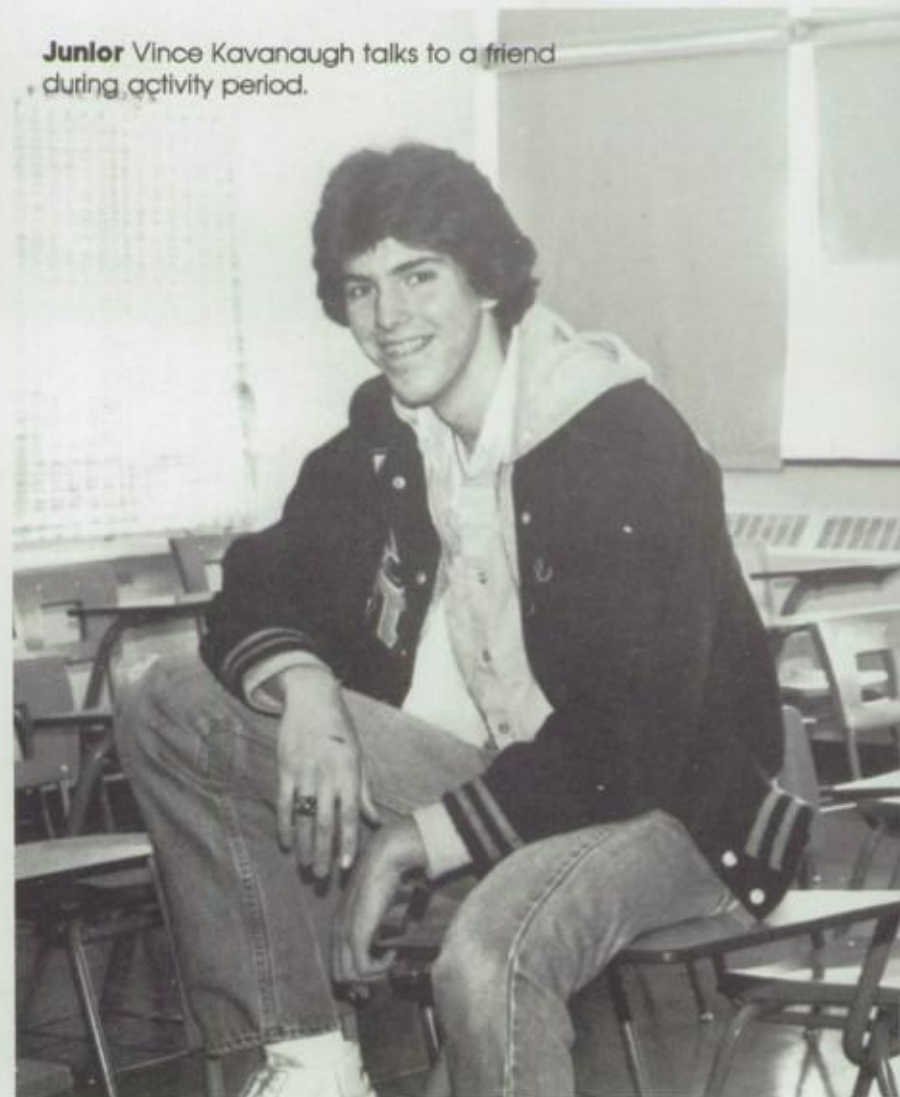

As juniors we were hailed for our outstanding ability to make our every endeavor a success. We were proud that we were recognized for our achievements and accomplishments. We discovered those among us who possessed leadership, scholarship, service, and character. Because of these possessions many of us were inducted into the National Honor Society, namely: Robbie Moore, Martha Pless, John Brooks, Jana Roach, Shawn Daly, Robin Saville, Ralph Stickman, Kristin Catulle, Tina Pilkind, Lisa Hawthorne, Tim Belcher, and Lisa Marsh.

To complete our junior year, a prom was sponsored to honor our graduating seniors.

Our achievements have been many thus far, and behind each one, stand those without whose help, we could not have thrived: the faculty and the principals of Broad Run. To them, along with our parents, we owe our achievements thus far. But we realize our story is only half told. Measured in success, we have come but a short way. But when the heights of our ambitions are reached, the credit shall have begun at Broad Run.

Going over his PSAT scores with Dr. Friedlander, Steve Hotaling anxiously awaits his final score.

Mental Anguish

PSAT's — the first step to becoming a senior. It is the first college entrance exam that juniors have taken.

Most juniors took this test in October. Students were put in the cafeteria for testing. The day of the test was one of nerves for some juniors, but mostly they just wanted to get it over with.

"It was long. Most kids just got tired of filling in the little circles," said one junior. Another junior thought the two hour test wasn't difficult but was tiring. The test consisted of vocabulary (in the form of antonyms), spatial relationships, reading comprehension, analogies, and other basic functions.

The students got their results the day before they left for Christmas vacation. For some juniors it was a day they'll never forget; for others it was a day they'd like to forget. The scores they received were an indication of what they might receive on the SAT's in March.

Although the test has no bearing on college entrance, it is an important factor in the National Merit Scholarship. The score students received could qualify them for the scholarship. However, only one-half of one percent of 11th grade students in the United States are qualified each year.

Reflections

Since September of nineteen hundred seventy-eight, many of the students who enrolled as freshmen have finally made it to the top. This four year period has not been an easy one for all of us. We have been faced with changing conditions that affected us, not only as students, but as individuals. Many of our days have been filled with uncertainty as to whether or not you passed a test, an exam, or a class, but with a faith and an untiring aspiration to reach our goal, we have pushed on. The greater majority of us have kept a faith in ourselves and a much greater faith in a Supreme Being to overcome the obstacles that have confronted us.

The years that we have spent here have been most rewarding. We have participated freely in the many varied activities like clubs, sports, and forensics that school life offers and from this participation we have grown socially and morally. These experiences have helped to develop us into the kinds of men and women that are representative of this age, and men and women that are capable of performing efficiently in our various areas of society.

As we prepare to depart from this institution and venture into unknown horizons, we shall forever think of Broad Run as the beginning of all our learnings, for it was here that we acquired many concepts and ideals that have helped to mold us into the kinds of personalities that we are today. We shall never reach the highest of our learnings, but as we strive to make our lives useful and serviceable to our fellow man, we hope that we will exemplify the knowledge acquired here to the Glory of Broad Run.

Tassles Where?

Who was wearing white frilly shirts, black tuxedo jackets, cut-off, and flip-flops? Yes, the senior guys of BR did. At the same time, the girls were combing their hair and applying make-up. In the background was heard: "Last name? First name? Address?" What was all of this? This haphazard scene was the first sign that the seniors were seniors. It was the beginning of August, and it was picture day.

The seniors were required to pay a $3.00 sitting fee. This price was for the environmental, or casuals, as well as for the formal poses. However, the expenditures did not stop here. When ordering day came for seniors, they had to come up with anywhere from $30.00 to $90.00 to order packages of pictures. But most seniors felt this price was not too high a price to pay for memories of their long-awaited senior year.

Another expense for the seniors was ordering their announcements, memory album, diploma, name cards, appreciation gift, thank-you notes, announcement cover, and senior keys. Most students ordered these by the package, but they could have chosen to itemize the order. The packages ranged from $38.00 to $74.00.

The seniors also had to purchase their caps and gowns. A few lucky seniors could wear the robes of older brothers and sisters, but most seniors spent the $9.62 to buy their own. The guys wore maroon caps and gowns, and the girls wore gold. Even though graduation cost the seniors an awful lot of money, it was worth it.

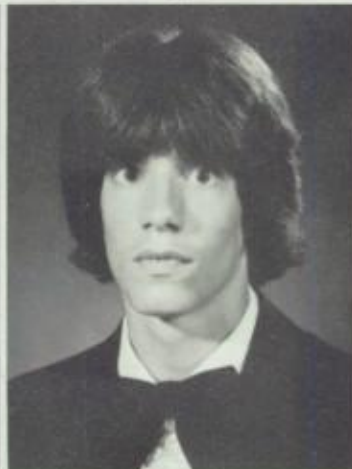

Caps and gowns are not the only thing offered to seniors. Students can also buy class keys for necklaces and bracelets.

A Must

Who was the first president of the United States?

To whom do Loudoun County residents pay their taxes?

Where was the Vietnam War?

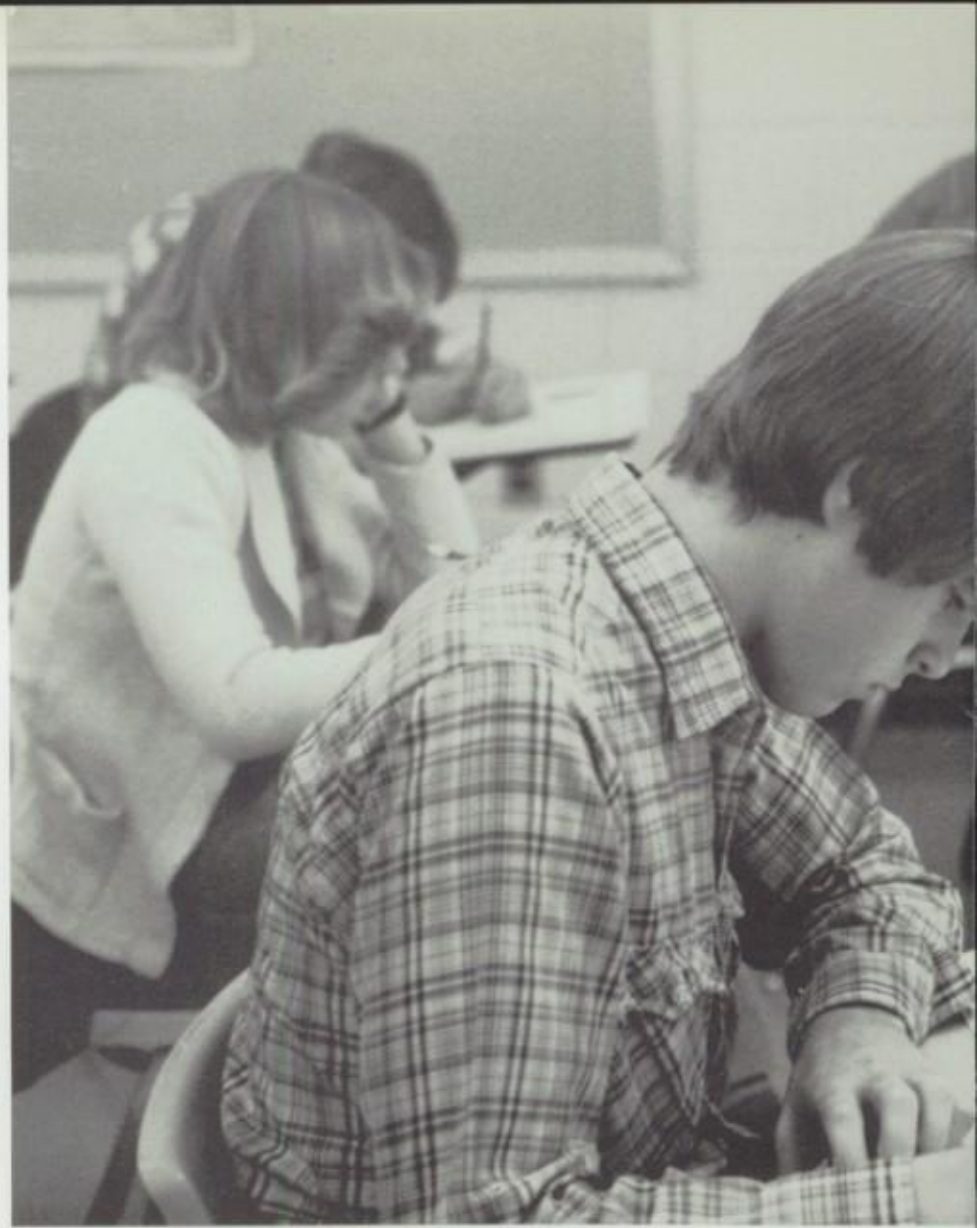

These were examples of questions on the competency tests the seniors took this year. The State required these test because it felt that graduating seniors didn't have enough basic skills in the areas of social studies, math, English, and citizenship.

The tests on English and math were given to the class of 1982 when they were sophomores. The exams involved a student's ability to read warning labels on bottles of household chemicals, to read simple maps and graph, to perform basic mathematics, and other everyday skills.

The social studies tests were taken on Nov. 11, 1981, during 1st period. The student who didn't take the test on the given date or who failed the test took the retake on Feb. 9, 1982. There were 100 questions on the test, and they ranged from questions about Loudoun County government to history of the U.S.

Many seniors felt that the test was primarily easy. One senior said, "It didn't take long, and that was a relief."

Brrrr . . .

One of the most common complaints of mankind is the weather. No matter what the forecast, there will always be someone who is happy and someone who is mad. This year's weather was so diverse that it seemed to be a favorite topic of conversation for everyone, including the anchormen of the evening news!

In August, at the beginning of school, the temperature was practically unbearable. The heat made it very hard to concentrate in those un-air-conditioned classrooms. Into October and November, the weather was surprisingly mild. It felt like springtime a good part of the 8 weeks.

But then came December. Records for cold were broken almost everyday. School was cancelled many times, moving exams back and totally confusing students and teachers alike. "They never let us out on time, so I was kind of expecting it," said Lora Bleutge of the senior graduation date being pushed back.

But Broad Run wasn't the only place hit by the freak weather. In California, mud slides caused millions of dollars in damage, and left thousands homeless. Atlanta was hit with 4 inches of snow, paralyzing the city because they had no snow removal equipment or drivers who knew how to drive in snow.

Florida's citrus and vegetable crops were damaged tremendously by a severe frost, resulting in higher prices and causing area stores to buy citrus from Mexico.

There were many theories concerning the weird weather. As usual, some people blamed the weather on the upcoming ice age. But there were some who had a different view on the weather. Some geologists feel that sunspots were the cause for bad weather, and they predicted earthquakes for many states during the summer.

Melting snow forms a puddle in front of the new wing, so David Thorton, Doug Aylestock, and Brian Haymond fish to see what they could catch.

On The Campaign Trail

Who says that volunteer work doesn't pay off? This fall, Joanne Timms and her mother went to Leesburg to the Democratic Headquarters for Loudoun County. There they worked for nine hours phoning and polling voters about the Virginia gubernatorial race. They also put in time distributing pamphlets throughout Broad Run Farms promoting Democratic Candidate Charles Robb.

When they signed up for the volunteer work, they did it as a civil service. Joanne's interest in government prompted her to help her mother with the Chuck Robb campaign.

After receiving her invitation to the state Inaugural ball, Joanne Timms is proud to display it to her friends.

Chuck Robb was elected governor and that was satisfying enough for the Timms'. Surprisingly, in December, Joanne's family received an exclusive invitation to the Inauguration.

This invitation included reserved seating at the inaugural ceremony and an invitation to attend the ball that evening at the Governor's mansion in Richmond. Unfortunately, the January snow storm trapped the Timms' here in Sterling. Joanne's once in a lifetime chance to attend an inaugural ball was gone.

Joanne has been accepted to Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Oklahoma so she will be leaving this area next fall. "But," she says, "I'd like to work on campaigns there."

Dead One Day, Alive the Next

You are creeping down a long hallway with your shadow against the lockers. You turn a corner near the library and you're knifed from behind! You fall to the ground bleeding all over the dirty tile floor. It all seems perfectly gruesome, but it's only a game . . . the assassin game.

Before Mr. Dineen, the club's sponsor, came to Broad Run, no one had ever heard of the game. He was talking to George Woodall and Tony Tribby about the game on college campuses, and they got the idea of starting a game here at Broad Run. They asked Mr. Dineen to sponsor them, and he agreed.

Rules governed the game, of course, — very strict rules. Most importantly, no potentially lethal weapons were allowed. Also, no student was allowed to interrupt a class to assassinate someone. Targets were assigned to the player at the beginning of each week, and it was their task to eliminate the mark before they themselves were assassinated. The scoring system was based on execution and originality. The maximum of twenty points per kill was rare. Eight to twelve points were more often the case.

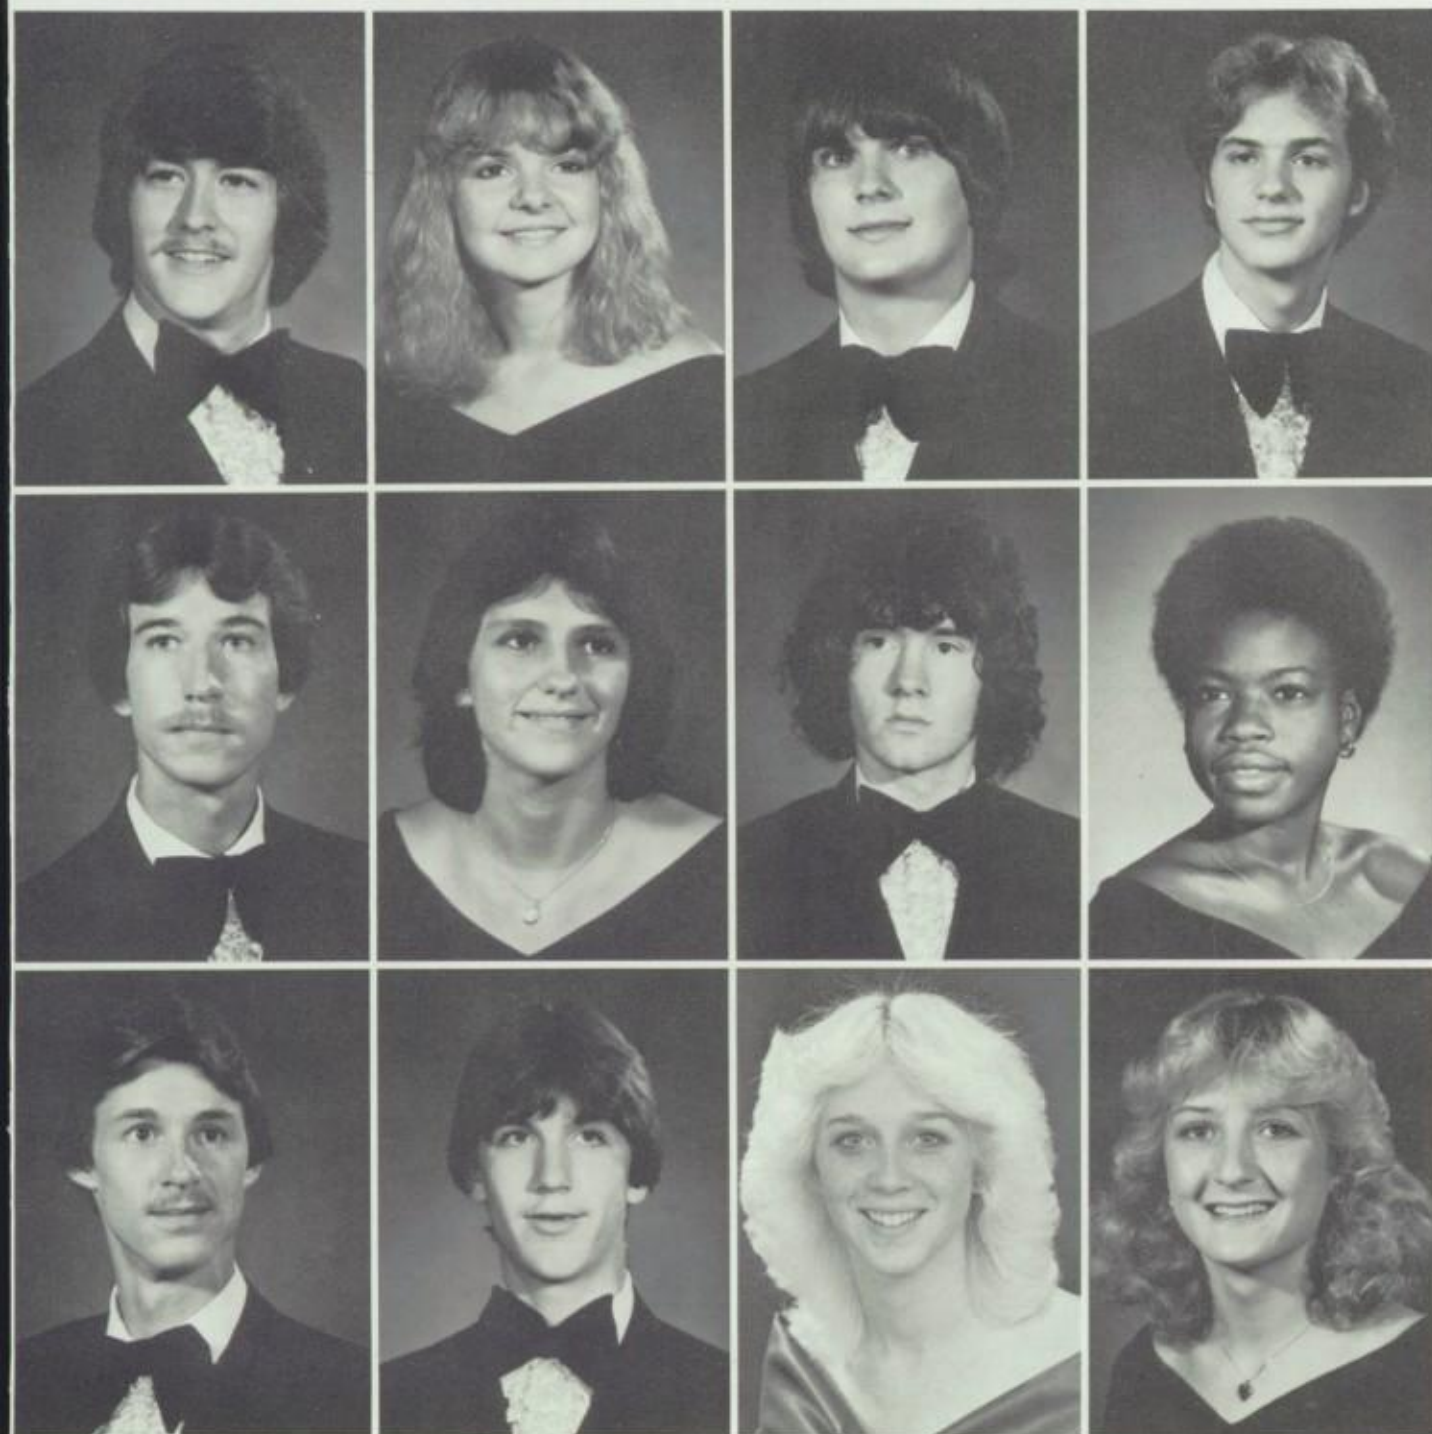

Of the more than 40 players involved, seniors Corby Anderson, Bobby Fulk, Duane Slyder, and John Sullivan were the most prominent. Kills were generally inventive in order to get more points, such as Bobby Fulk's assassination of Mike Besant. Mike was the victim of the incredible shaving cream balloon bomb. Mic Platt was blown to smithereens by explosive runes, which Mike Evans had left on Mic's chair in band.

Contributing to the demise of the game were the parents of some students. Parents called the school complaining that their children were ignoring their homework in order to make strange looking bombs. Principal Griffith had no choice but to have the club disbanded.

One student's comment was, "I'm sorry the club was disbanded, but I'm glad Mr. Dineen didn't get into any trouble. I felt the game was beneficial to the players in terms of their creativity, originality, and awareness. I hope we will be able to have the assassin club next year."

Stalking a victim is one of the major factors in the assassin game.

Moving On

One one-hour ceremony; it took twelve years to get there. The seniors sat outside, silently laughing at the speaker. Nerves. They played with the tassels on their mortarboards. They clenched and unclenched their hands. As each graduate approached the step leading up to the stage, he or she sent up a silent prayer that he wouldn't trip and fall crossing the platform.

What the students was about to receive was a 7" x 13" leather case that held the lease on a job. The student opened the case and there, before his eyes was NOTHING. To insure that the India ink on the diploma would not smear if it rained, (and it usually does), the senior class sponsors kept the actual diplomas inside the cafeteria until after the ceremony.

After receiving the 7" x 13" piece of paper, the student was ready for future. From here, we went on to try for another piece of paper, be it a paycheck or another sheepskin. Whatever is in store for us, we're ready.

Broad Run Big Wheels

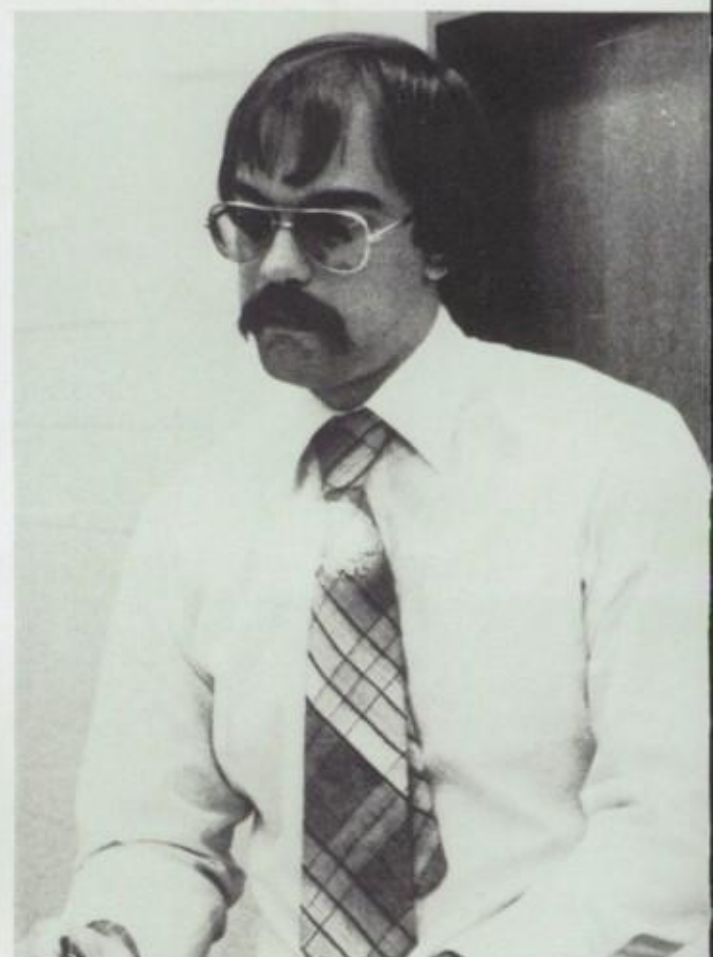

The main man at BRHS is our principal, E. Wayne Griffith. He's been with us now for three years. He enjoys golf, music, and sports. He attended Virginia Technological State University.

Broad Run's activity coordinator, Karen Baker, is in charge of all school-related events. She supervises sports events and events during activity period. Mrs. Baker attended Shepherd College in West Virginia.

One of our second-in-commands, Janice B. White, is in charge of school maintenance and discipline for the freshmen and the juniors. She attended Mary Washington College, and graduated from VPI. She enjoys reading, camping, and sports.

Our other vice-principal, David G. Smith is in charge of school curriculum and sophomore and senior discipline. He attended VPI and West Virginia University. He enjoys reading and bird-watching.

One of the secretaries at Broad Run is Joyce B. Poland. She enjoys cooking, canning, and crocheting.

The attendance secretary at Broad Run is Marsha Boone. She enjoys sewing, canning, and gardening.

The bookkeeper at Broad Run is Eve H. Morrison. Mrs. Morrison graduated from Hardbarger's Secretarial School. She enjoys reading, rug hooking, and knitting.

Broad Run's guidance secretary is Edith Howser. Her main hobby is reading.

Looking up from their work, Mrs. Ruth Biggers and Mrs. Betty Andrews check to see what is going on in the library. They are the librarians for our school. Mrs. Andrews, the head librarian, attended James Madison University, and she enjoys sailing, cats, and flowers. And Mrs. Biggers, the librarian clerk, enjoys reading, knitting, and antiques.

Treating the sick, the injured, and the ones who do not fall into either category is our Nurse Donna Kelly. Nurse Kelly is a friend to everyone, whether they are sick or not. She graduated from Shadyside Hospital School. Her hobbies are reading, making crafts, and traveling.

Extra Effort

You knew that the team had a great season, You knew that the activity last Friday was exciting. But you never knew who was behind the scene, organizing, planning, and supporting each team and club at Broad Run. These unsung heroes were none other than the teachers.

New Life Club sponsor Mrs. Whetzel takes time out every Friday to meet with her group, which includes Susan Walker.

Teachers gave up their time and energy to make life at Broad Run more than just curricular activities and events.

English teacher Mr. Byrd was the assistant coach to the varsity and JV football teams, and he was the tennis coach. He stated that even though practice takes a lot of time, he enjoyed being a part of the game. He said, "My greatest pleasure as a coach is seeing an athlete work hard and achieve his or her potential in that particular sport."

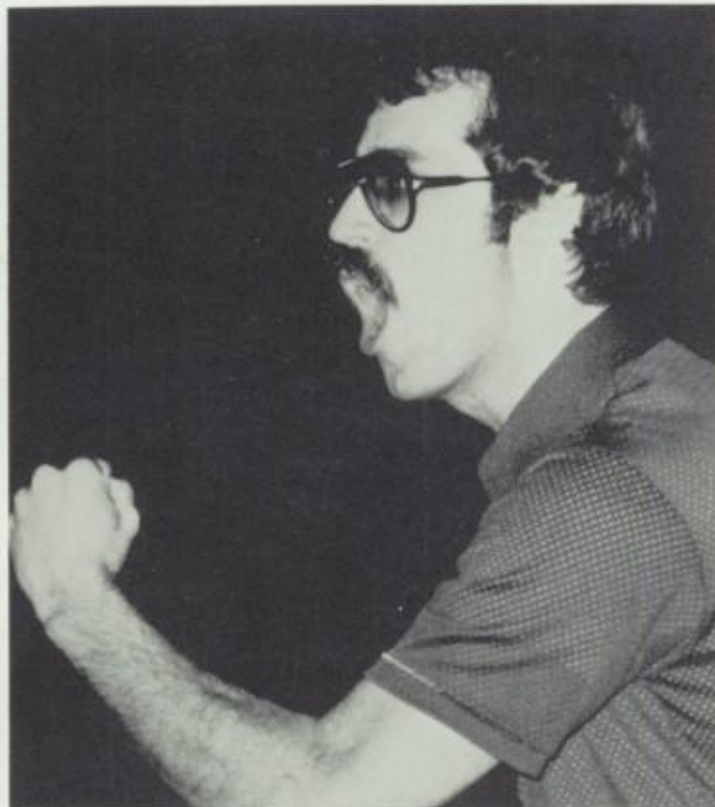

When asked why she sponsored the freshmen cheerleaders, Mrs. Wentz replied, "I do it to contribute to the school. It does take a tremendous amount of time; I have to be there during practice and games. I enjoy supporting them, watching them conducting themselves as cheerleaders, and seeing them keep up their grades at the same time. It's a lot of responsibility."

When students don't perform well, the sponsor is there to give comfort. Here Coach Null consoles Aida Aragon after her defeat in a cross country race at Handley.

But contrary to popular belief, sports aren't the only extracurricular activities at BR. Sponsoring a club was just as frustrating, time-consuming, and rewarding for the teachers. Mrs. Hersman, besides her duties as German Club sponsor, also had many responsibilities as the sponsor of the SCA. It was very hectic having to raise so much money. As the sponsor, she lined up people to work in the concession stands, and she organized committees to pick out the annual SCA movie. In addition, she and Mr. Kazmierczak also ran the fall Magazine Drive.

Let's face it . . . school would not be school if we didn't have teachers. Besides the academic aspect of Broad Run, teachers were involved in many other activities that took time, energy, and organization.

Mary da Fairy donated these 3.

Assistant football coach Bill Byrd spends hours after school on the football field.

Debate team sponsor Neil Dineen has a collection of obnoxious ties. Many were gifts from his students.

Ruth Keiper: attended Lincoln Memorial U.; enjoys gardening, piano; teaches English, A.P. English.

Michele Lacy: attended Shenandoah College; enjoys music, weightlifting; teaches Chorus.

Don Lutes: attended Hiram College, VPI; enjoys hunting; teaches Calculus, Math.

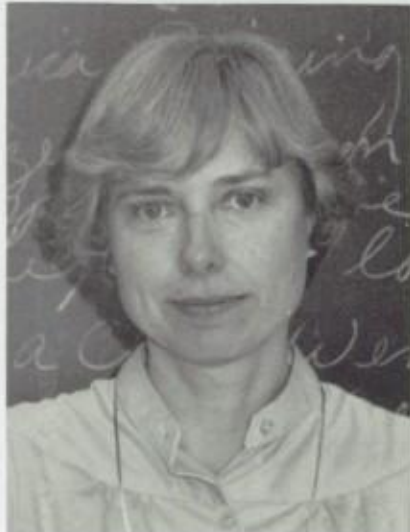

Nancy Markham: attended Madison College; enjoys plants; teaches Typing, Business Law, General Business.

Jeri McGiverin: attended Iowa State, UCLA; enjoys piano; teaches English.

Ruth Meeker: attended Marshall University; enjoys camping; teaches French.

Debbie Merrow: attended Radford; enjoys painting; teaches English, History.

Anne Miller: attended American University; enjoys travel; teaches English, Math, Social Studies.

Hyper Keiper

"A love/hate relationship" was how the newest English teacher, Ruth Keiper, described her job. "On good days I love it. On bad days I hate it."

Mrs. Keiper taught a wide variety of students. She taught sophomore English, senior English, and Advanced Placement English. On the subject of A.P. English, she said, "It's time consuming, frustrating, and challenging. It is difficult to reach these students and make them understand certain interpretations of the works they read."

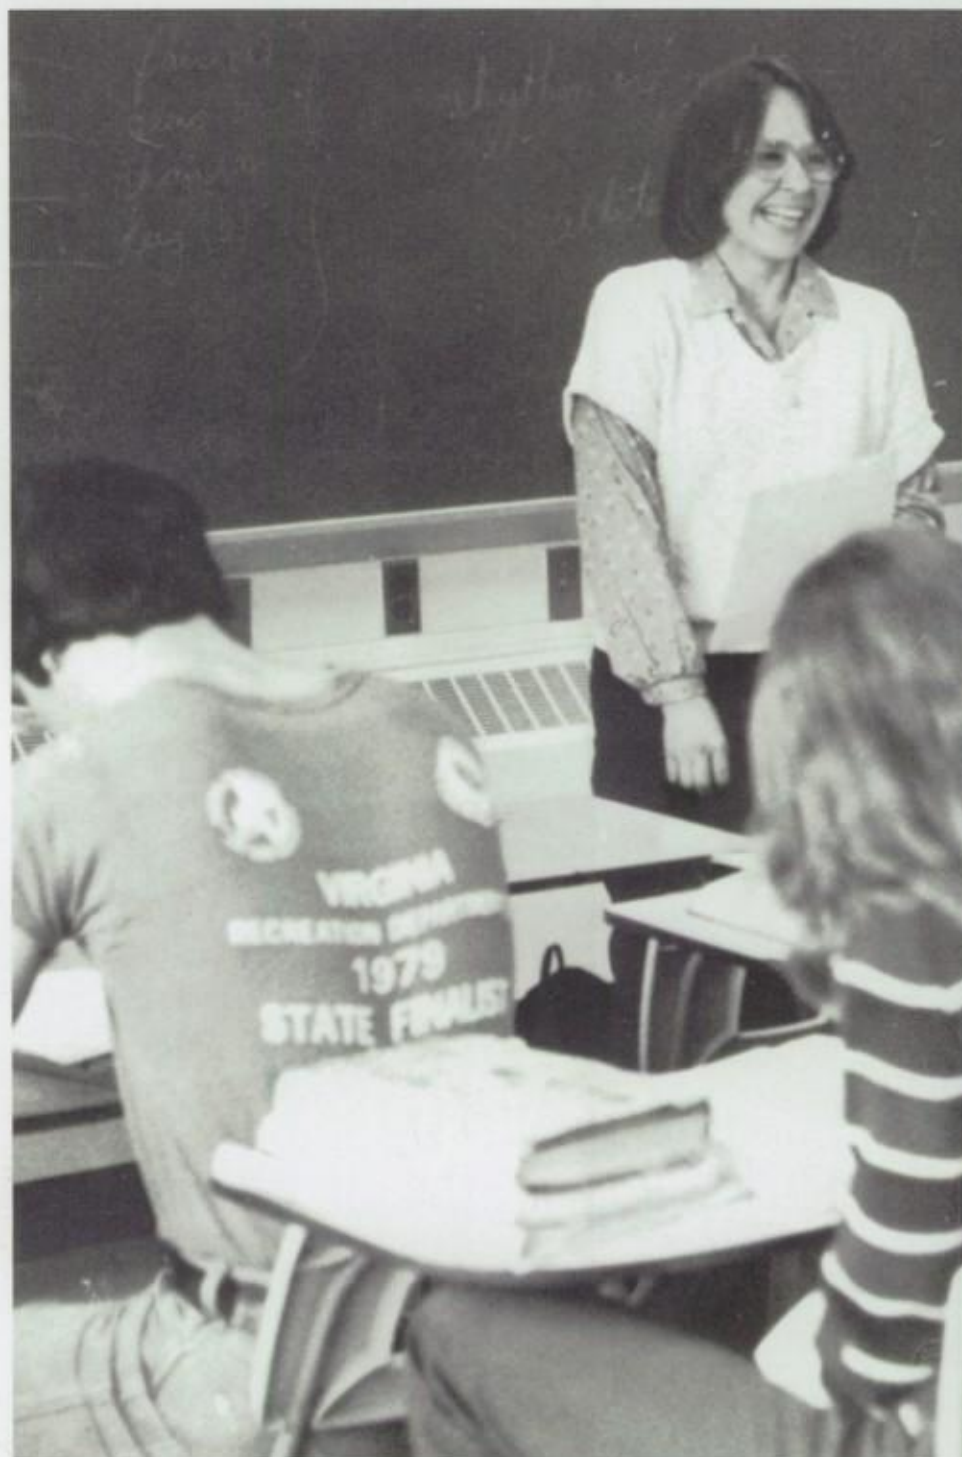

Mrs. Keiper began teaching because a major influence in her life told her she needed "a good, stable job." She holds a degree in English from Lincoln Memorial University, a small school with a big name, in Tennessee.

"I would like to eventually quit teaching on the high school level," she responded when asked her views on education. She has seen some changes in public and private education. "The individual, genuine concern on the teacher's part has increased greatly." She also feels that whereas students used to read a great deal, now they watch TV. This affects a student's performance in class.

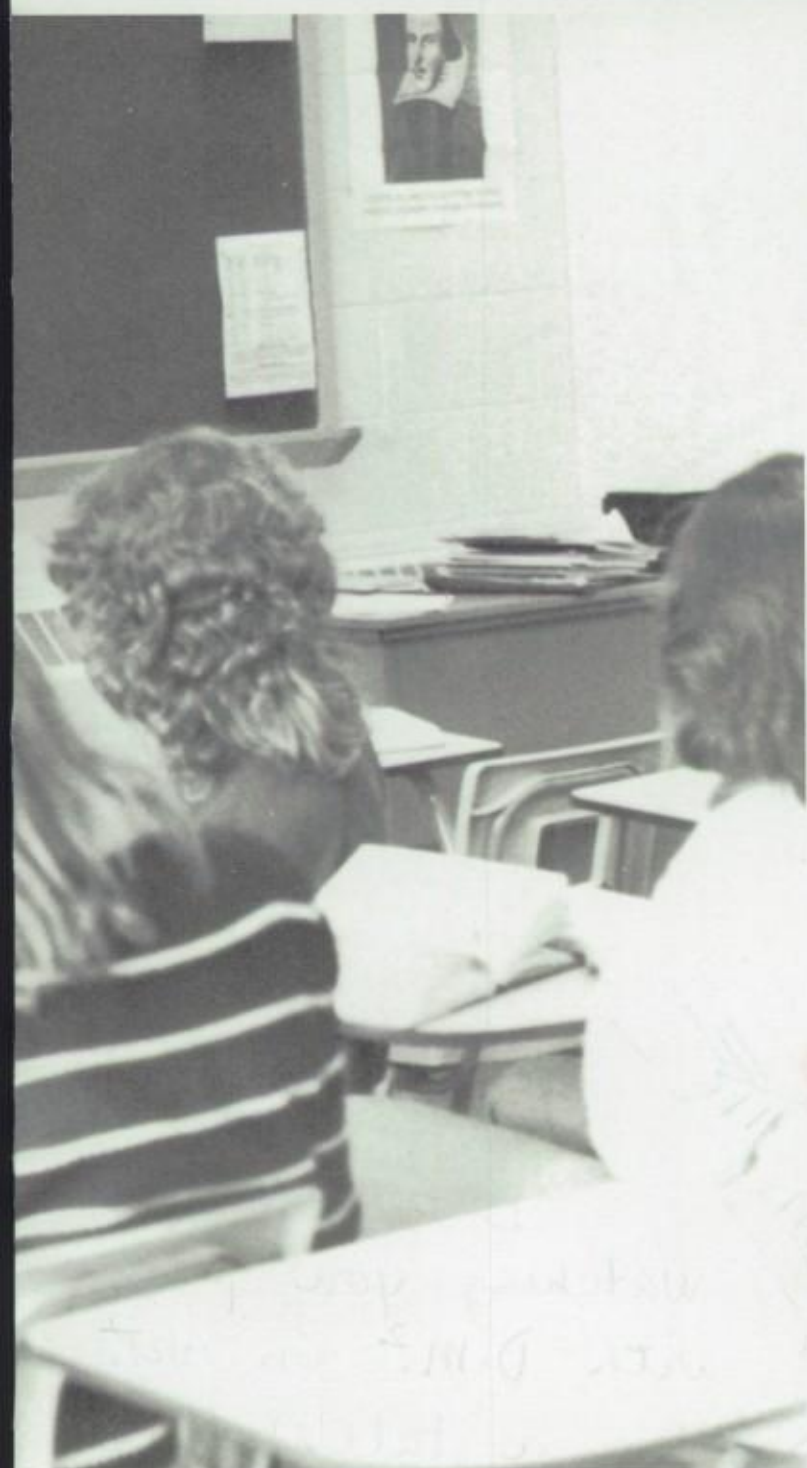

As a teacher, Mrs. Keiper was unique. She had a way of transforming dull old Shakespeare, in her hyper-Keiper way, into an interesting subject. The often-difficult readings were made easier to comprehend under her guidance.

Even though she is new this year, Mrs. Keiper feels totally comfortable with her students.

Biology teacher Mrs. Bonnie Soto examines a likely subject for the next dissection lab.

Weekend pastry chef Mrs. Echols uses her talents to make money at the Dulles Marriot Hotel. Trifle, a delicious dessert made of sponge cake, custard, and raspberry preserves, is her specialty.

After 3:15

It's hard on teachers — especially new teachers — to make a living on the meager salary they receive. Many teachers, in order to supplement their pay, took second jobs. Ms. Goins, who teaches government, was a prime example of being forced to take a second job. She worked as a sales clerk at Woodward & Lothrop. When asked how she liked working there, she replied, "I hate it, I hate it. It takes time away from my schoolwork and puts me in a higher tax bracket." However, she needed the job for the money.

Mrs. Merrow, however, was in a slightly different situation. She has had two second jobs. She worked at Memco until she got married last year, but quit to spend more time with her husband. When her husband was promoted and had to spend more time in Baltimore, she took another job to fill her time.

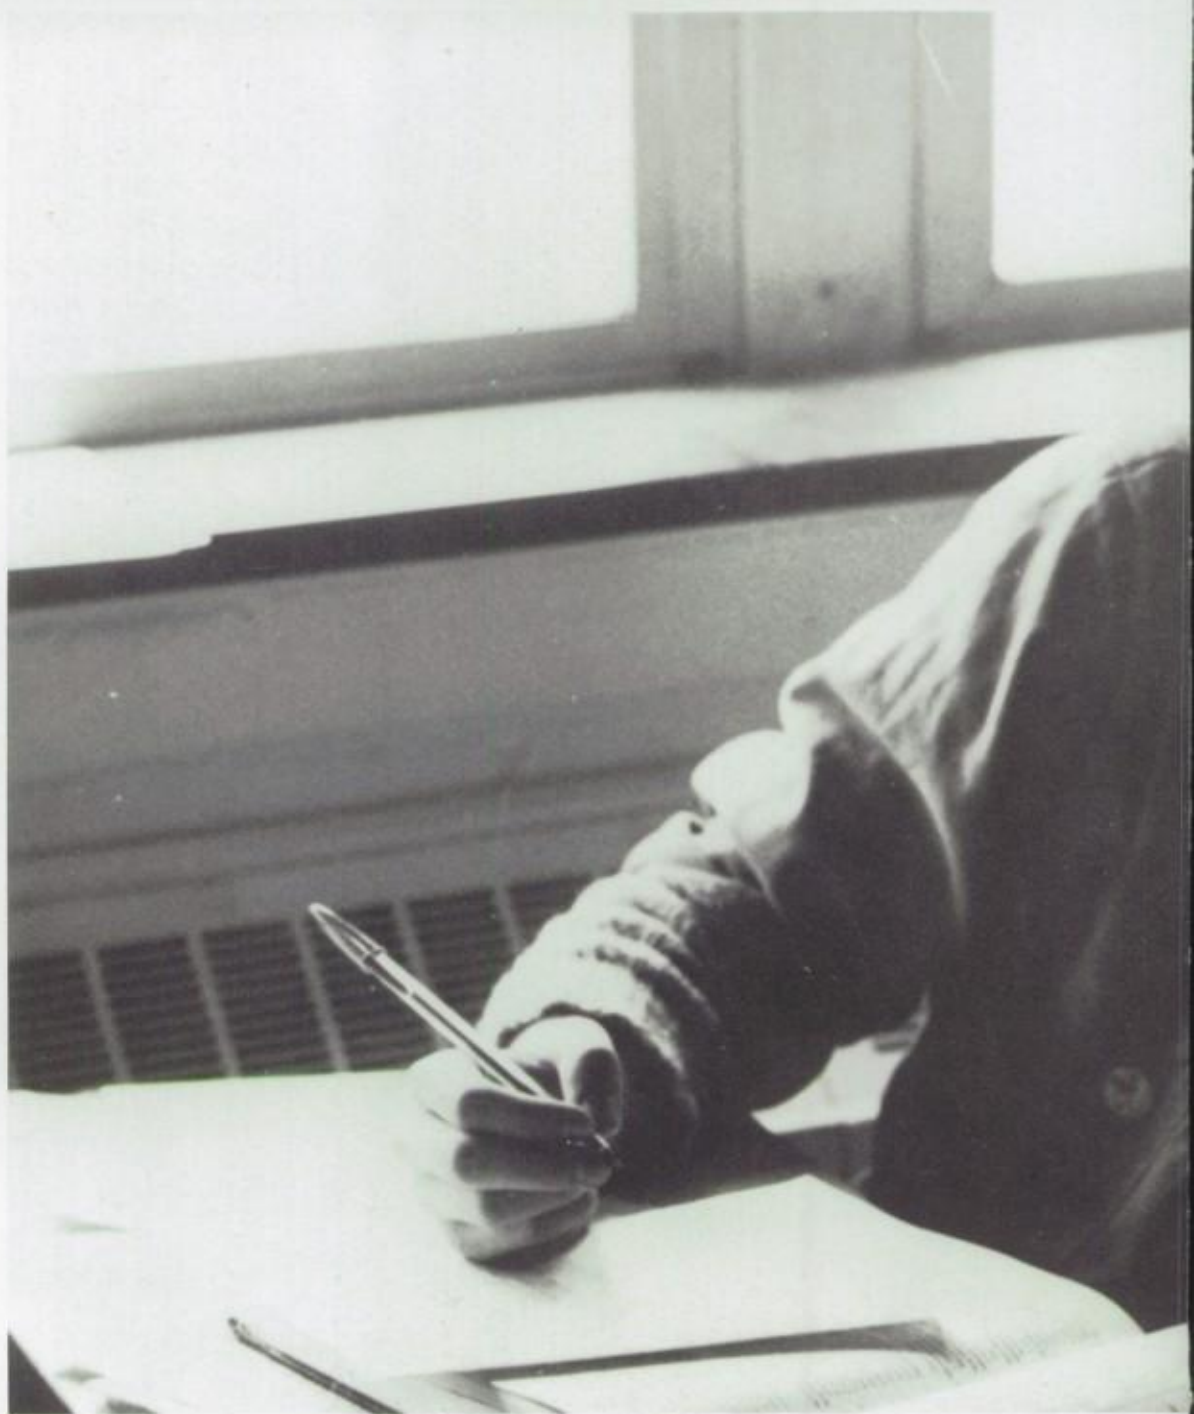

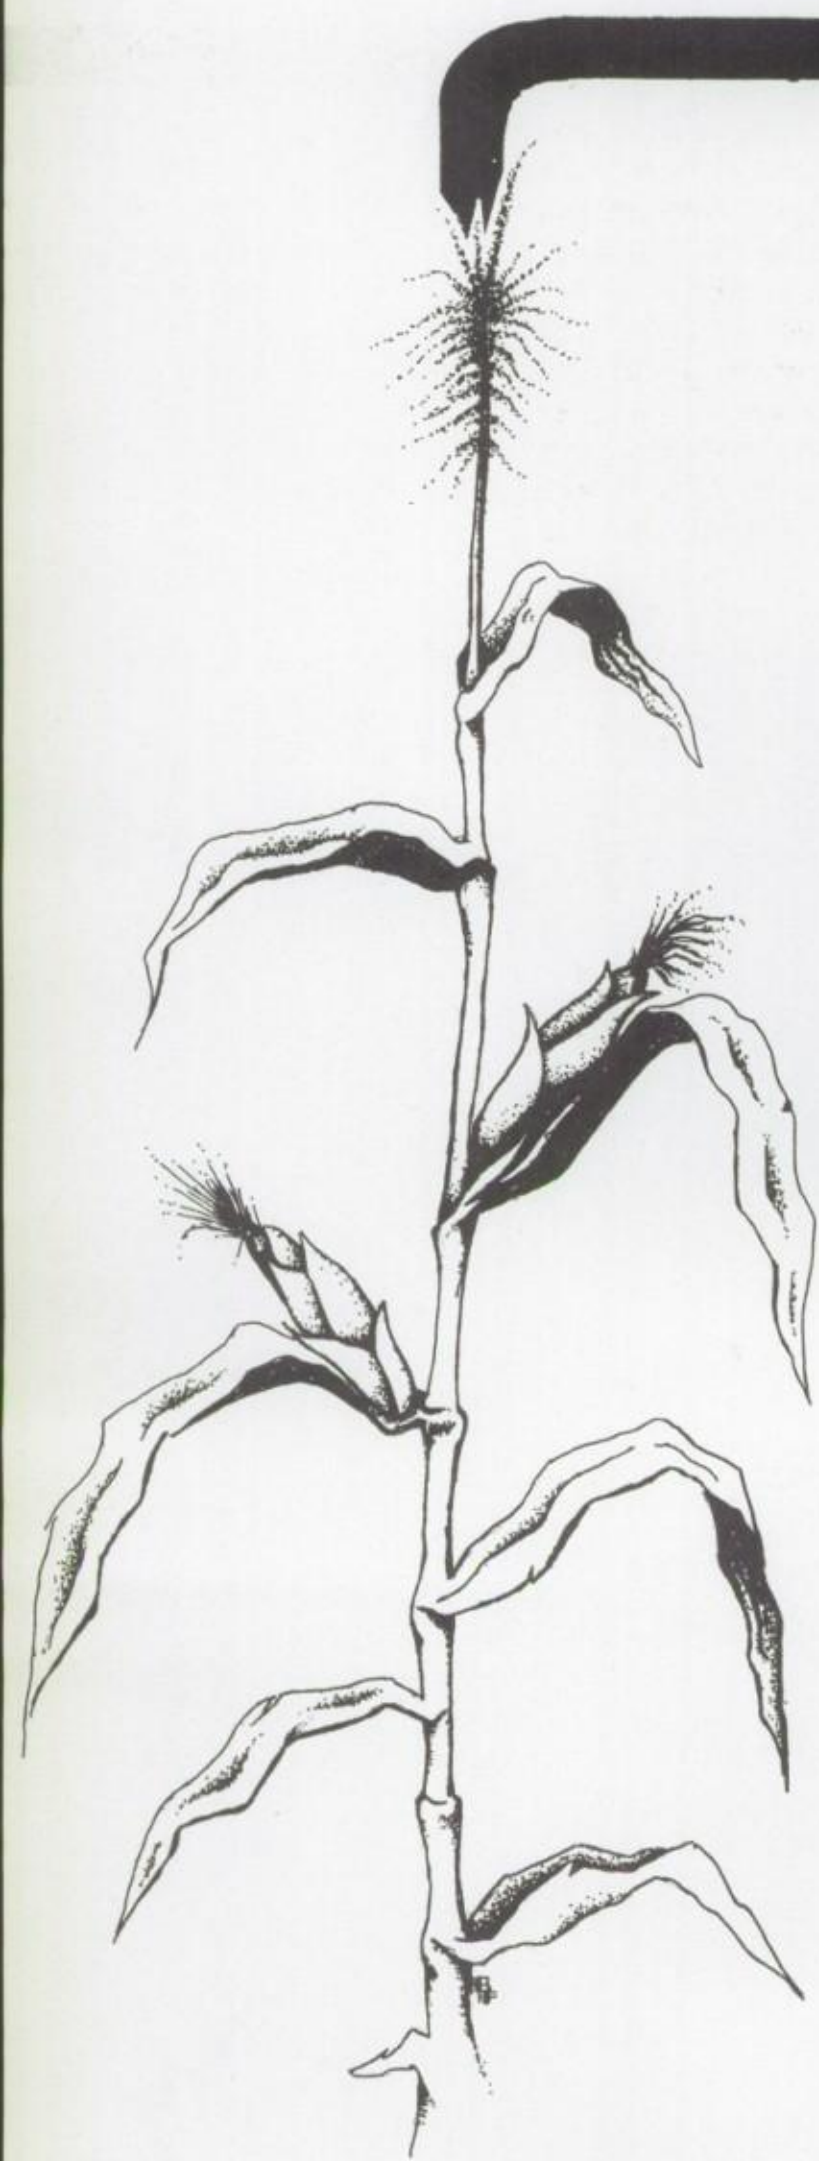

History teacher Mr. Yankey worked for the state park and recreation commission and also as a part-time bartender. He enjoyed his work and didn't feel that it interfered with his schoolwork. He would rather not have a second job, but as he said, "I need the money."

Everyone in a senior English class studies Macbeth. In his mind's eye, Mark Williamson watches Lady Macbeth's vain attempts to wash the bloodstains from her hands.

Academics

Face it! the academic curriculum is why we're here. Students often think classes are the worst part of the day. Lectures can sometimes put students to sleep, yet there always seems to be something in a class students like. Projects, video-tapes, and field trips are always anticipated by the students. They seem to break the monotony of having class after class. Field trips take students to Washington. Senior English students go to the Folger Theater to see a play, language and art classes go to the National Gallery of Art. Language students also have the opportunity to take trips abroad; this includes England, Mexico, Germany, and Italy.

The objective behind these various activities of course is to provide a good education. High school is the key to students future as far as applying to colleges and that full time job you really want.

Preparing for the Future

School is not just working math problems, answering essay questions, or concentrating on the textbooks. Students enrolled in the Business and Vocational Classes actually learn by doing.

The Business Department has tremendously increased in the modern equipment the students can use. They learn how to work with machines such as computer keypunch and adding machine for accounting. In addition, the Cooperative Office Education program allows the senior and junior to be excused early from school for work. At the same time, the students receive credits for working during school hours.

As for the Industrial Department, it offers different opportunities for the industrial students. The field varies from World of Construction. In General Industrial Art I and II, students plan, design and make projects that use materials, tools and processes from the basics of modern industry and technology. World of Construction class teaches the students to design, build and test scale model structure. Basic Technical Drawing provides basic skills needed to read or draw plans used in every day life. For Architectural Drawing, it provides basic knowledge needed to understand structural techniques and material. Last but not least, Power and Transportation students survey the many broad sources of energy and power utilized in power and transportation system.

Working carefully with the equipment, Mark Dudek puts a finishing touch on his project.

During the Business Class, Mrs. Glenn shares her knowledge with Kris Lary. Students attempt to beat their latest time during the speeding drill.

Concentrating on her typing skill, Wendy Judy asks Mrs. Glenn a question.

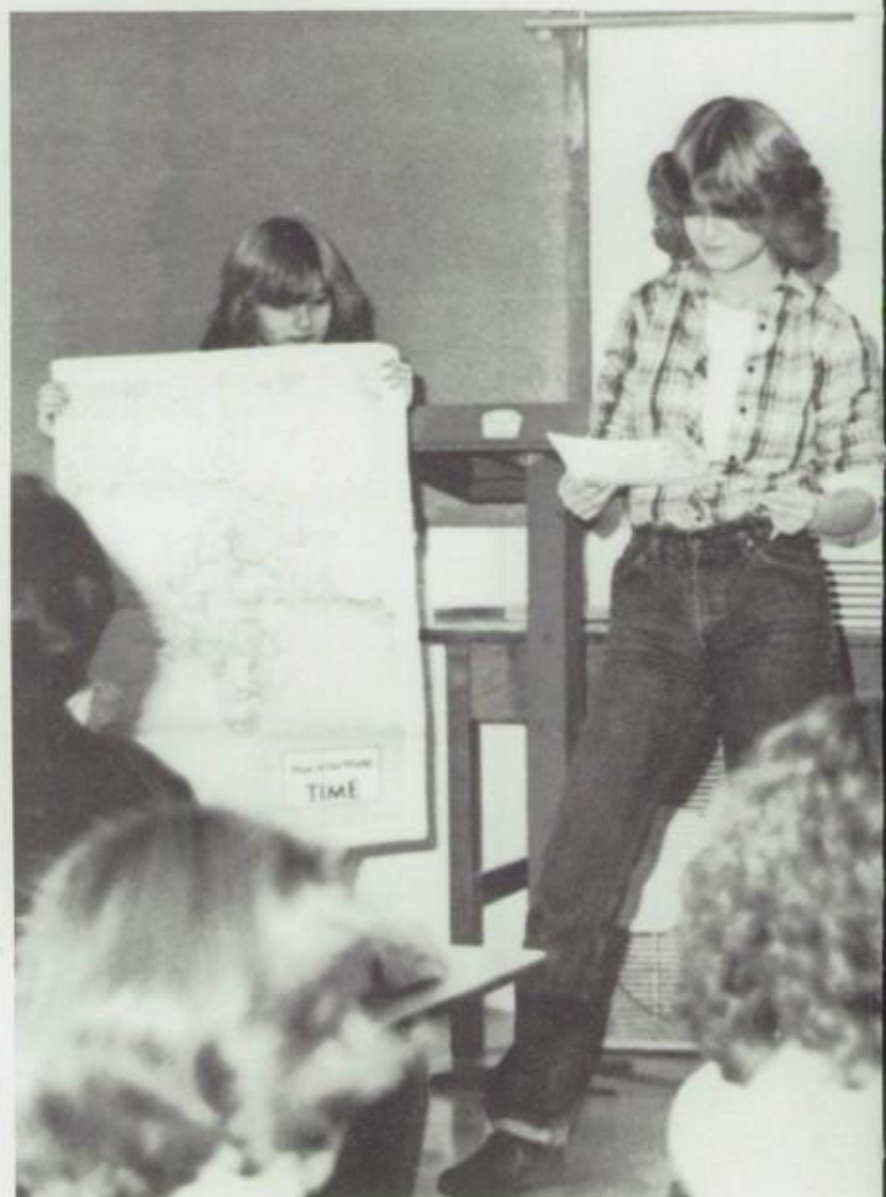

Wearing replicas of authentic Delaware Indian costumes, will Spence and Mike Bleutge are presenting their project for the colonial literature unit.

Junior Collette Brosky portrays a Puritan woman and talks about the Salem witch trials as the class is studying The Crucible.

Even taking notes can be fun when the Greek gods are on your side, as Jeff Martin and Kim Sullivan discover.

Using a map as a visual aid, Pam Sutphin presents her project.

Required, but Worth It

A class we all must suffer through is English. Students are required to take four years of English in high school. When asked about the necessity of English, freshman Patrick Cardine replied, "I know proper English is required for us to know and learn. I myself enjoy reading literature and also like creative writing, like poetry. But I tend to be lazy when it comes to learning grammar, because I've learned basically the same things every year."

Each level has required reading. For example, Romeo and Juliet was read by the freshmen, and sophomores read Julius Caesar. Juniors read The Crucible, while seniors toiled through MacBeth. Ninth and tenth grades focus more on grammar and writing styles. The juniors emphasized American literature and wrote a 4-6 page term paper. Seniors concentrated on British literature.

This was the first year Advanced Placement English was offered for students who are capable of handling composition and literature at a rapid pace. At the end of the year, students were eligible to take a test to receive college credit for English.

AP students Dan Weber, Patti Weaver, Joann White, and Duane Slyder discuss Pygmalion, by George Bernard Shaw, with Mrs. Keiper.

While the AP English class takes a break from a discussion, they enjoy a few laughs from the class jokes.

For his mythology project Scott Gonzalez dressed up as Persephone, queen of the underworld.

Creatively Active

"What's Art?" It's evidence of civilization and documentation in life. Students who enjoy drawing do participate in art class. The first year students concentrated on the elements of design, such as line, shape, size, texture, and color. They learned to develop skills in drawing, painting, printing, ceramic, and sculpture media. The second year students worked more individually and learned how to visualize a piece of art work. A few of the projects were sketching and silkscreening. The advanced art students, worked on a very independent basis. For example, Mark Williamson and David Stackpole made an animated film about the Vikings. Students from all classes participated in the Loudoun County Art Show in the Spring.

Art is also music, and our band has been very active. They returned from the homecoming parade at Madison College with the second place prize in the Parade Competition. They also marched at King's Dominion. The band also raised funds for their new uniforms which arrived in time for our homecoming. They attended a Christmas Parade, presented a Christmas Concert, and a Spring Concert.

Collette Brosky was our new drum-major. When asked about the condition of the band, she said, "the band has improved a lot this year, and we hope to have the best band in Loudoun County next year."

Besides our band, we also have our talented chorus groups. There are Varsity Chorus, Spartan Singers, and the Treble Choir. Throughout the district, eighteen schools tried out for the District 9 All-Regional Chorus. Four of our girls made it, and they are Nancy Timberlake, Alecia Grzech, Kim Perry, and Leslie Keplinger (our alternate). The pianist was John Havener.

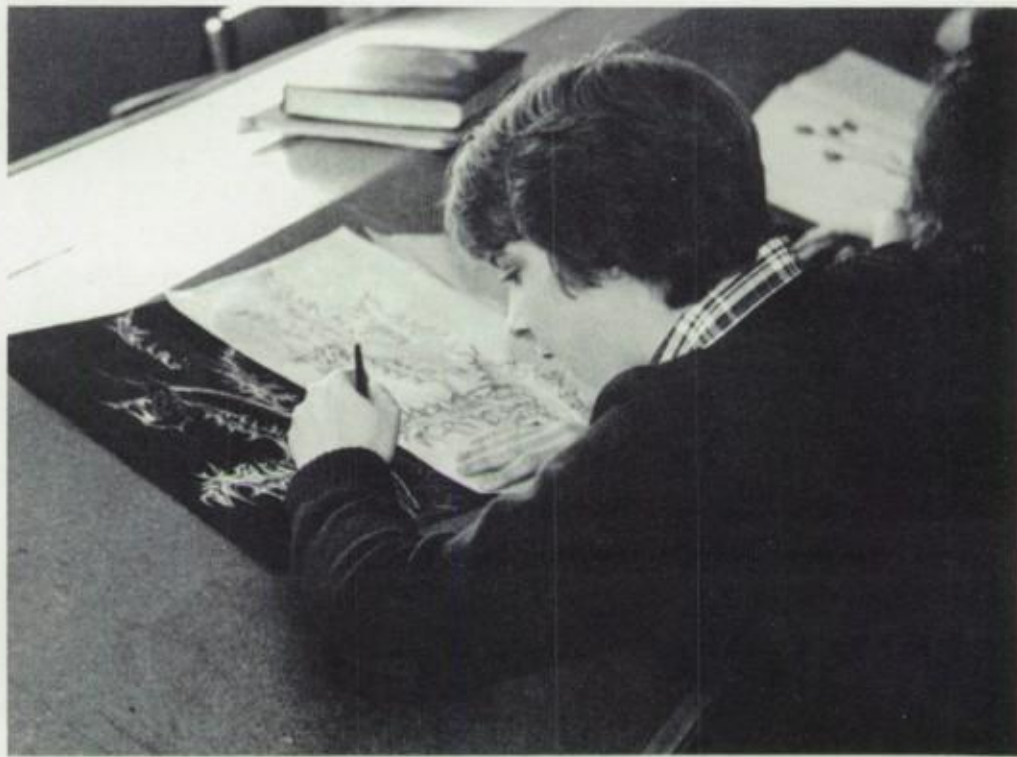

Spartan Singers — James Ebert, Darryl Robinson, and Phillip Jessup are practicing their singing for Christmas Concert.

Preparing for their concert, Margaret Jackson, Pam Brunetti, and Patty Oswald, and Kim Perry practice their alto parts.

While Cara Devier is in art, she is drawing her master-piece.

The advanced-art class is taking their breaks after their long hour works.

Senior James Owens borrows a calculator from Mr. Lutes.

What's a Mole?

Ask this of a chemistry student, and he would respond, "A mole is a mathematical equation which equals 6.02×10^{23} ." But ask this to a biology student and he would say, "A mole is a small, four-legged animal that burrows and has grey fur." Both answers are correct, though, and both have equal importance in the technical fields of math and science.

Biology is the study of life and cells. Students learned about DNA and RNA, which are protein synthesis, osmosis, defusion, and genetics. During lab day, students studied different parts of a cell, how to use a microscope, metrics, chemistry, different stages of miosis and mitosis, and the biological community. Another offering of the science department is chemistry, which is a wide-ranged college preparatory course. The students learned both theories and laboratory practices in major chemical principles. They studied the solution of chemical problems such as how to calculate the gram-molecular mass for copper or how to find the percentage of each element in aluminum oxide. Occasionally, the students had lab day in which they learned to mix chemicals together and study the reaction of the experiment.

However, a strong math background is required for studying science. Students needed to have a year of algebra, which provided the knowledge necessary to solve the various equations and math problems. Advanced math students learned trigonometry and calculus in order to prepare them for higher mathematics courses in college.

In Geometry, the students learned different theories, postulates, and corollaries. Calculus A and B taught students both differential and integral Calculus. This course was equivalent to one year of college calculus.

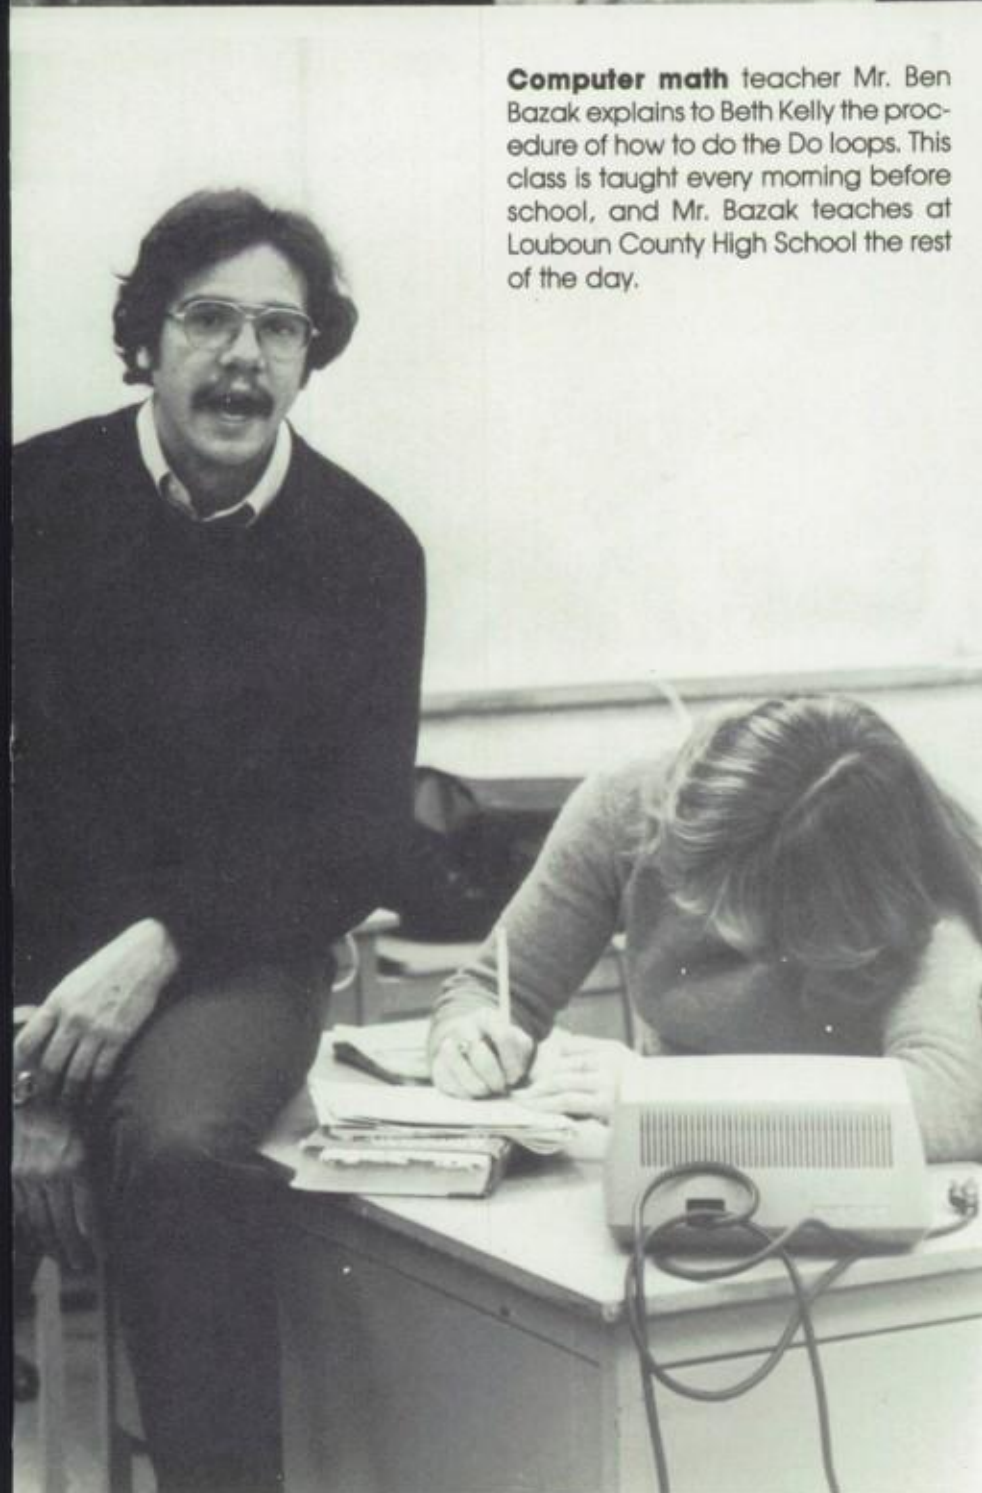

The world is becoming more and more technically advanced, and students must keep pace with this trend. A strong background in math and science seemed the logical choice to many Broad Run students.

World Wise

National news, discovery of America, marriage, parlezvous francais?, sprechen sie deutsch?, hablas espanol? Obviously, Broad Run students knew more about the world than can be learned by staying in the tiny town of Ashburn. The emphasis on social studies and foreign language made the students more aware of the world.

Our students studied history, beginning with the discovery of America to present day. Occasionally, they were assigned research papers; a sample topic was "Why was the Civil War more an economic war, instead of a war about slavery?" The government classes covered the Constitution, the Declaration of Independence, national laws, state laws, and county laws. In addition to this, every Friday they had to do current events, which were oral reports on topics in the news: international, national, and local. Government classes also did research papers. In Sociology students studied human behavior. They actually staged a wedding to study the economic and social considerations in a modern marriage.

In addition to learning about the United States, students had the opportunity to learn French, Spanish, German, or Latin. Studying foreign languages, students learned to speak and read another language. Students were given a chance to test what they had learned by taking one of the many foreign language trips offered by Loudoun County every two years.

Sports

When you think sports you might think winning is everything. But it isn't. You can still have pride in your school, your team, and yourself, even if your record is 0-10. Every athlete knows that if she or he does his best, even though the team might not win, they still have their pride.

Athletes sweat and work every day after school during the season. Practice is mandatory, so students and coaches often orient their entire day's schedule around practice. Total devotion and concentration is needed and given for every sport.

Meetings are also a part of sports. Coaches often have their teams come in after school on game days to view films. All mistakes show up on film, so hopefully the athlete will become more aware of his weak spots by watching these films. From this experience teams put together their offenses and defenses.

The culmination of meetings and practices is the game. All the hours, all the work, and all the practices to achieve perfection come down to one 2 hour segment. To the watcher it might not seem like much, but to the player it is worth it.

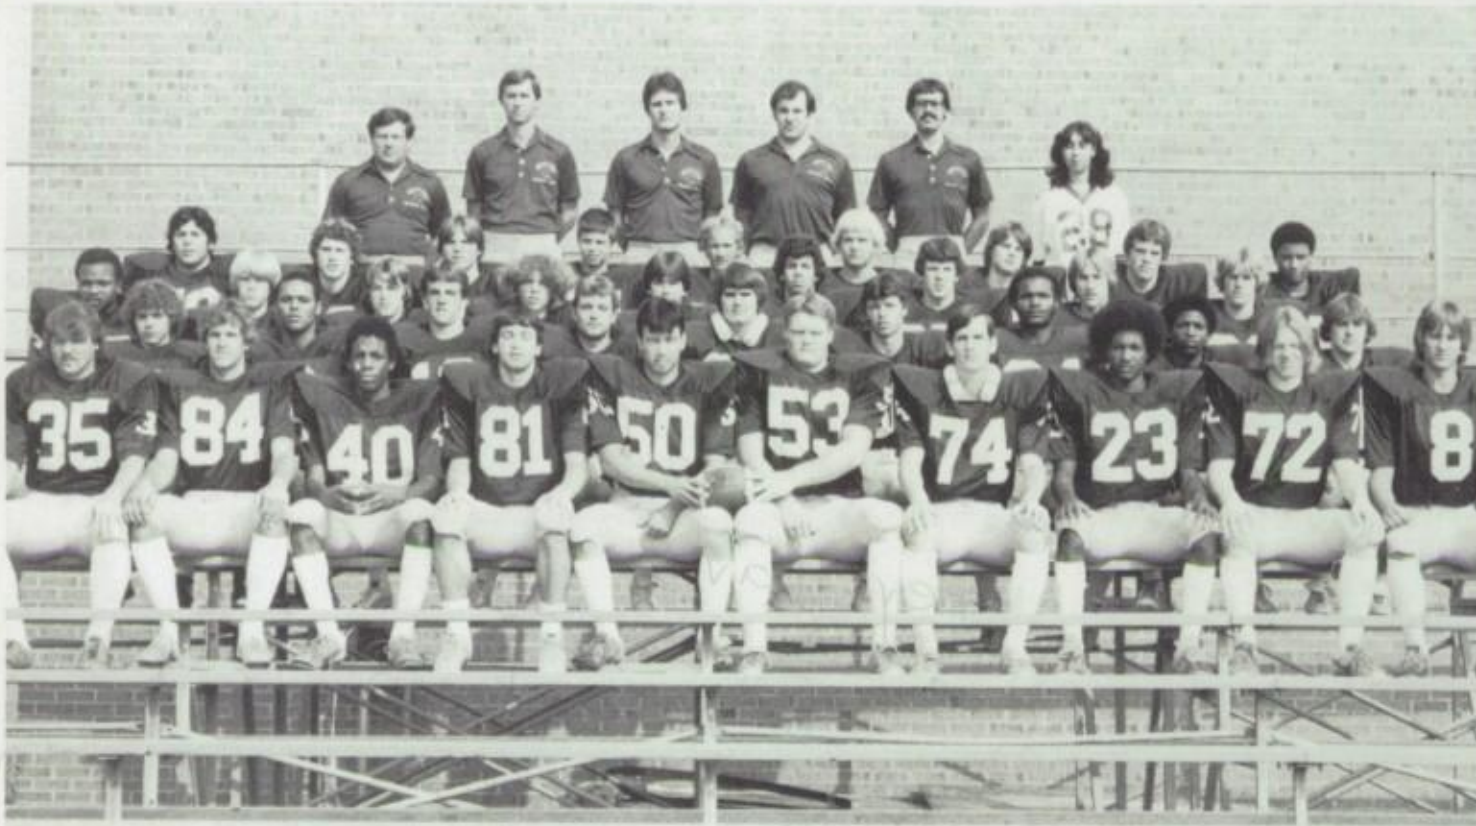

Hey David,

Good Luck in the 10th grade, hope to see you in some of my classes.

Although the Varsity Football team finished with a losing record of 3-7, some good things did evolve from the season. Rex Gotcher was named to the first all-district team as a split end. This is a great achievement. The all district teams are chosen by all the district coaches, so the player chosen has proved his ability to more than just his own coach.

The second all-district team, although not as prestigious, is still a very high honor. Tom Malloy, Rob Simmons, and Duke Jackson received second team recognition. Tom was chosen as an inside linebacker, Rob was picked as center, and Duke as a halfback. Coincidentally all three of the Spartan wins were homecoming games. The first was against Loudoun County where the Spartans won 20-19. The next was against Osborn Park where the Spartans shut out the yellow jackets 20-0. Then to top it all off, the Spartans beat Clark County at the Broad Run homecoming by a score of 21-0. Although the overall record did not show great achievement, there were many lesser victories.

Against Park View, Tom Malloy prepares the offense to drive towards the goal.

The stunning Spartan defense anticipates and stops a Park View play.

Fighting Hard

In 1980, the Spartans fought hard and remained in the contest for first place until the end of the season. 1981 was to be an improvement upon that record, but failure to execute and a lack of experience in the line forced the Spartans to fight for everything they got. Many players were moved from former positions to better aid the team. Senior Tom Malloy not only started at quarterback but also at inside linebacker. Kenny Compton was moved from tailback to guard early in the practice season.

In order to prepare for the future, many young players were used heavily. One of the most surprising of those athletes was Randy Cockrell. Although Randy was only a freshman, he lettered this past year and was one of the Spartans' best runners. Jeff Pelasera, a sophomore, also played a lot as guard. Jeff played in the first J.V. game but was then moved up to varsity. Another sophomore, Barrington Paige, lettered and ran tailback. He, too, was moved up from the J.V. to the varsity squad.

Some others who went from J.V. to varsity were Brian Callahan, Scott Fiebelman, and Jeff Voivoda.

Working Toward A Better Future

Working and practicing on a football field all week can be very depressing — especially when you lose games. It's hard to lose and always have to look into the future for relief. In this way, however, the Junior Varsity and Freshman football teams gained experience that they will all need as they move up to varsity in the years to come. This year's freshman team, coached by Wayne Lewis and Ben Lacy, fought hard to build a winning team. They finished their season with a record of 2-4-0.

The Junior Varsity team was made up of the younger and less-experienced members of the varsity squad. They practiced with the varsity and dressed for Friday night games. But, on Wednesday they got their chance to shine. After winning their first four games, this team suffered two disappointing losses to end their season somewhat dismayed. Many of the J.V. members advanced to play varsity football later in the season. The hard work must have paid off!

Building a team is an aspect of sports that all coaches must learn to accept. Often, time building a team includes one or two losing seasons, as was the case with the girls' varsity basketball team. Having only one senior, the team struggled through the season winning only 3 of 18 regular season games.

Injuries also plagued the team. Beth Dacey and Alease Brown suffered knee injuries, and Melissa Brown sustained an ankle injury.

Finishing Third

Spirit and drive propelled the girls' soccer team to a winning season. Finishing 7-5-2, the team was composed mostly of underclassmen. Two of the team's freshmen made the all-district team this year. Donna Principe was a first team all-district fullback, and Mary Carothers was second all-district halfback. Senior captain Tina Kimmerly had an exceptional season and was elected as a first team all-district forward.

At districts, the team had a fine showing. In the first round, the Spartans defeated the Osbourn Eagles 1-0. Then the Spartans suffered a loss to Park View 1-2, finishing third overall in the district. This year also marked the first victory over Loudoun County in the history of B.R.H.S. These girls and our school have a lot to be proud of.

A Long, Long Way to Go

Of all the sports at Broad Run, Cross Country is probably the most physically grueling. The running is long and requires great stamina, and the track is just as the name suggests — cross country.

This year's team consisted of fifteen guys and two girls. Most of the members were young and there were no seniors. Aida Aragon and Tammy Fleming made up the girl's team and competed with other girls in the district. The two top boy runners were David Haas and John Carothers. David finished thirteenth in the district and was the only team member to advance to regional competition. John was twenty-third in the district.

Being there through the bad times is what coaching is all about. Here, Coach Null comforts Tammy Fleming as she suffers a cramp.

We've Got Spirit

Cheerleading is not all fame and fun. Anyone who has gone even a short while as a cheerleader knows the time and tribulation the sport takes.

Last summer, cheerleaders spent a week at Randolph-Macon College at camp. They worked on a tight schedule all week, sometimes in 95 degree heat. The week was exhausting, but the squads came out with excellent comments from the judges. Funds were raised by selling shampoo and having a car wash in July.

Many people didn't know that the cheerleaders organized the pep rallies, but they did. The varsity cheerleaders also ran the "Mr. Homecoming" contest.

This year, the sponsors tried something new. They added a winter squad. This way, conflicts between gymnastics and cheerleading were avoided.

Good Show

Even though the record did not reflect it, the guys on the varsity basketball team turned in fine performances. Tommy Malloy, who led the team, had 267 points and 174 rebounds. Kevin Jackson was the second leading scorer with 234 points, but he had only 69 rebounds. Ben Detwiler had 178 points and 102 rebounds, and Duke Jackson scored 166 points and 50 rebounds.

Gary Schott led the team with 56% of the shots he took going in the basket. Tommy Malloy made 49%, and Carl Forrester made 43%.

Considering that this was Coach Joe Cochran's second year of coaching this varsity team, he led them to a very good season. "Our year started off very well, but we had some rough spots after losing Frank and Carl," Mr. Cochran said. "After losing both of them, it was very hard for the rest of the players to pick up and try to fill in the void left by them."

The second Park View game was one of the most exciting games of the season. The crowd was really getting into the game, and so were the players. Mr. Cochran said, "The team played one of its best games, and they showed a lot of class."

All in all, the team finished their season with a 7-14 record. "I was pleased with the individual progress of the players, but thought that our team progress could have been better," concluded Coach Cochran.

Being taller than everyone else is one advantage that Ben Detwiler (6'7") has over everyone on the other teams.

Stepping Up

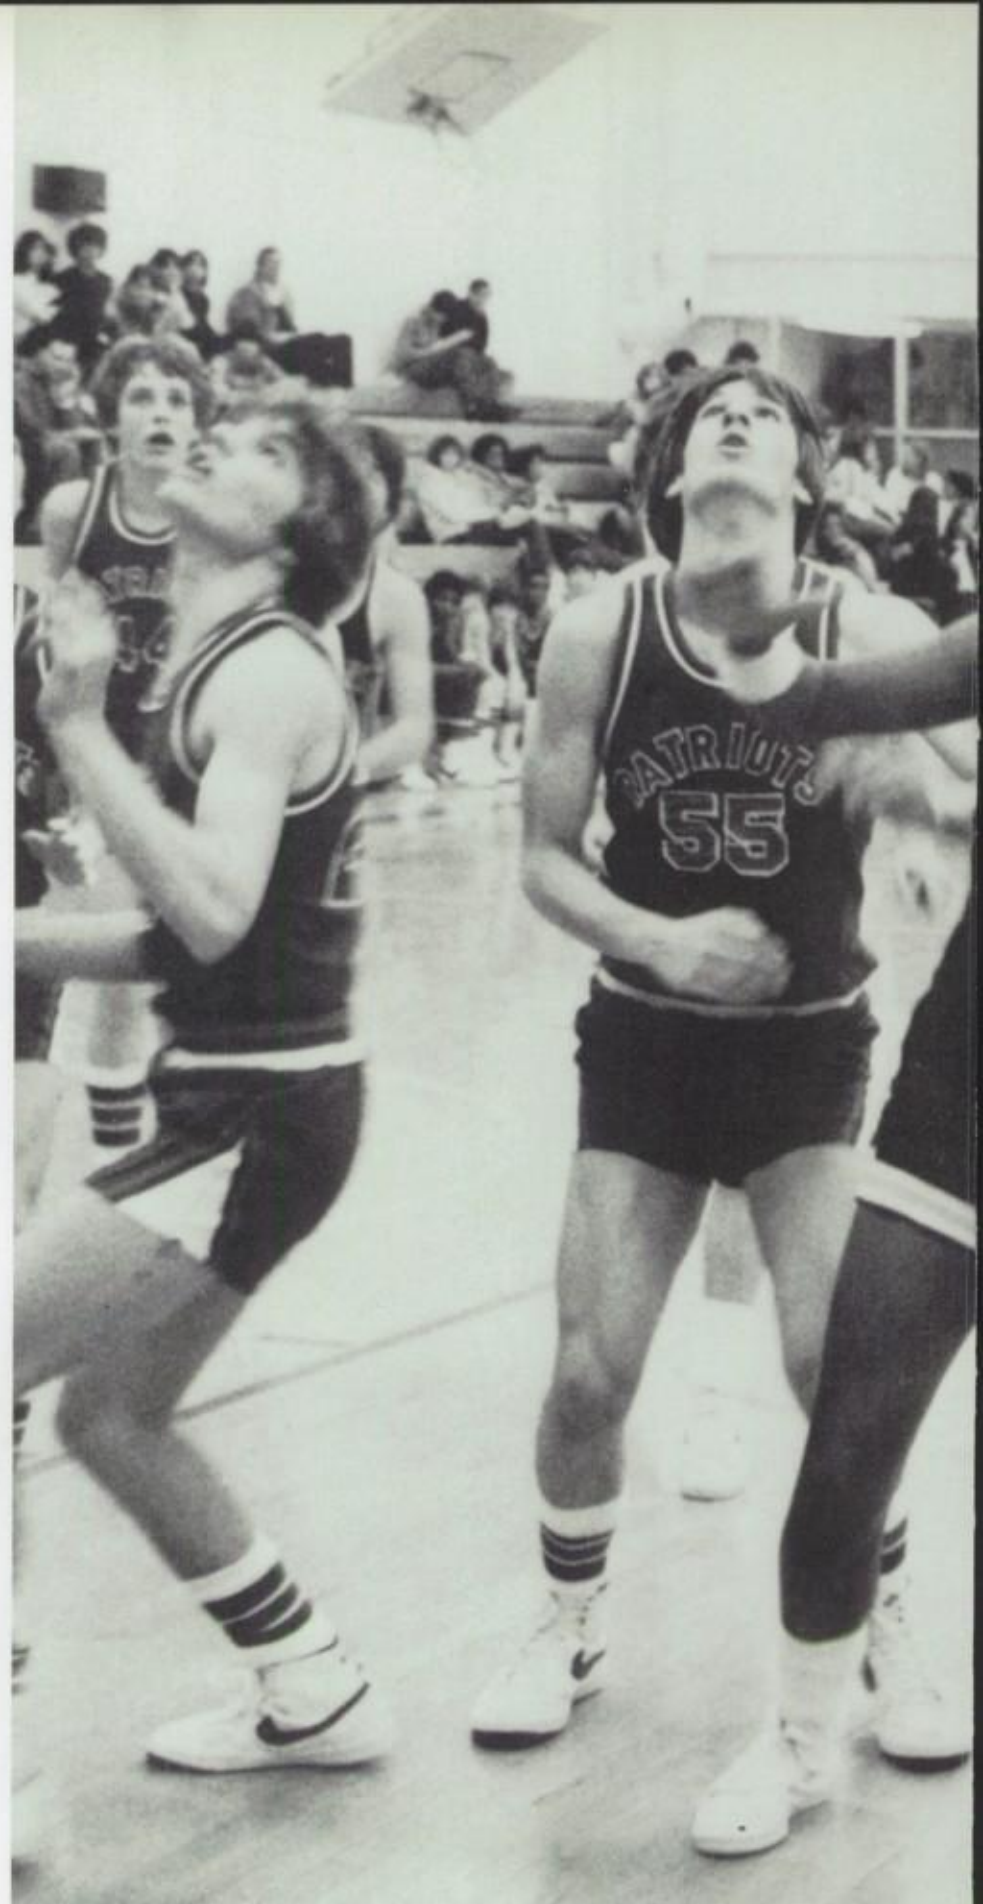

Basketball is a team sport made up of individual effort. The 1982 Junior Varsity team showed great improvement in their skills as shown by their record. Being coached by the same coach as last year, Joe "Bear" Smith, helped the team in its effort to win. Joel Hayden, who rode the bench during his freshmen year, came off the bench during the J.V. season to become the starting center.

Joel was only one of the players who showed great improvement in his rebounding and shooting. Other good performances were turned in by Steve Hackett, Ty Hausch, Scott Fiebelman, and Jeff Hawes.

Then, of course, there was the new crop, the freshmen. Coached by a new coach, Dan Morgan, the team struggled through its season with a 2-13 record. Being Coach Morgan's first year with a team, he was pleased with the freshmen's performance, beating Park View twice and hanging with the rest of the district teams. Good performances were turned in by Brian "Red" Hayton, Mike Bishop, and Dwayne Crouch.

During the Park View game, Mike Ambers (44) and Joel Hayden prepare to go after a rebound.

On the Mats

Stuffy gymnasiums and sweaty vinyl mats set the scene for months of winter work for our wrestling and gymnastics teams. These athletes must cope with blisters, mat burns, and the tensions involved with performing in a closed atmosphere.

The wrestling team, coached this year by Jerry Smith, suffered a frustrating season. Although they worked hard, none of the Spartan mat men went to the regional tournament.

On the brighter side, heavyweight Mike LoPresti finished fourth in the district. Mike attributes his success to the experience he gained last year. "This is the first year I wrestled varsity. I feel I improved a lot."

Often times, the key to wrestling success lies in pure discipline and guts. "To really do well," Carl York said, "you must wrestle at a weight below normal." Losing weight without strength loss helps to win matches. Some Spartan wrestlers lost as much as ten pounds to improve their performance.

The gymnastics team gained a new sponsor this year as well as some new members. But the veteran gymnasts showed their stuff in the end. Jennifer Shingleton, who placed eighth in the district on the balance beam, and Joy Broderick were this year's captains.

This year's top gymnast was Theresa Robey. Theresa, a sophomore, finished seventh in the district and tenth in the region in the floor exercise event.

The newcomers to the team included a new sponsor, Mrs. Sutor, as well as many freshmen members, Kim Little and Diane Jones were among the young gymnasts.

"We put in a lot of work," said Jennifer Butts, "But we get a lot out of it too."

Diamonds in the Rough

Walking the new gym, in his macho coach's strut, Coach Holmes inspects the athletes before him. They're doing a speed drill. One person throws two balls alternately in different directions and his partner throws them back to him. Suddenly Mr. Holmes' expression changes, and he blurts out, "C'mon people, you all move like girls!" The entire team speeds up the drill.

Meanwhile, out in the student parking lot, Coach Yankey wonders around his team with the same contempt. He looks at the girls practicing and yells, "We have a lot of work to do today. None of you are helping that!"

These scenes could be viewed anytime during March and April, while the baseball and softball teams were gearing up for the 1982 spring contests.

Despite their harsh and degrading words, both of these coaches had good things to say about their teams and the season. Coach Holmes said about the boys team, "Things are coming together, but they have to work. I'm confident." Coach Yankey showed the same confidence. "I'm pretty pleased," he said. "There are some very good players out there."

Christy Lentile, the only senior on the softball team, said, "Well, we lost the whole outfield, but the infield is returning. A lot of younger players are really showing their stuff — Amy Berry, Angel Walker." Junior Ralph Stickman said, "I really think we'll do well."

The sprints are over. The athletes breathe heavily and lean on each other, sweating. "We had a good workout today," Coach Todd tells the team "But if we're going to be good we have to work a lot harder. It's going to get rough."

During fly ball drills, Ralph Stickman and Tim Golden catch up for Coach Todd.

During an indoor practice, Jonica Bufford shows her stuff on third base.

Unsung

Before the warmth of spring reaches Broad Run, while the freezing cold and the snow linger, our soccer and golf teams begin their preparation for the upcoming season. They're all out there in heavy sweat pants, hats, and wool gloves. These individuals get very little recognition for what they do. They're out there for themselves and for their school.

"We've always been overshadowed," said Tim Belcher, a junior and a forward on the soccer team, "but this year, people better take notice. Realistically, we could put four people on the first district team."

Rory Badura, a senior soccer player added, "We could win the district with this team, but our first goal is to beat Park View."

Senior Neil Cassidy told us, "Soccer and golf are really overshadowed, not only at school but the Loudoun newspaper coverage is poor. This team is made of friends who have played together for years — We can be great!"

The golf players felt the same way. The program has been unpopular because it is not a big spectator sport. Senior Marc Helms, a veteran golfer said, "We know golf isn't great to watch but the school could give us more. This is a building year from last year." "We placed third in the district but we lost some people."

Tim Belcher spoke for both the golf and soccer teams saying, "Maybe a good performance this year will let people see that we're good . . . very good."

Fighting for the ball. Dave Doran and Mike Bishop nearly collide.

With lightening speed, Duane Slyder moves the ball downfield.

Golf: front — Marc Helms, Craig Collins, back — John Sullivan, Ben Detwiler, Mike Bleutge, Fred Asher.

During a cold March practice, Duane Slyder still can put the pressure on as he stays in pursuit of goalie Vince Kavanaugh.

Sliding for the ball, Vince Kavanaugh prevents Steve Hackett from scoring.

Planning the day's practice session, Coach Poland and Coach Dineen converse with manager Donna Principe.

Great Turnout

For many years, the Broad Run track program never had a very good turnout. The coaches had to go out and literally recruit members. But for the first time both track teams had a great turnout this season. The girls' team had more than 15 members, and the boys' team had over 20. The teams had members interested in almost every event, including shotput, longjump, hurdles, and all the running events.

Practices ran from 3:30 to 5:30, during which no one was left just standing around. Alternating between sprint work and road work helped keep the runners in great shape for their events. While the weightmen lifted most of the time to increase their strength to get an extra inch in their throwing, the hurdlers and jumpers worked on their leg strength for that extra power.

The girls track team benefited a lot from the talent of the freshmen because of their middle school track experience. "If we could compete on enthusiasm alone, we'd no doubt be one of the strongest teams in the district.

The team is young, and they must learn to dedicate themselves and strive to be the best," said Coach Judy Harding.

The boys track team was aided by the dedication of Coach Dolph Null to help everyone in each specific event. David Haas was exceptionally strong in the distance events, along with Dan Weber in the hurdles. The VanNess boys, Gary and Dean, showed great strength in throwing events.

With deep determination, Christy Andros works hard for a good throw.

Driving towards the finish line, Mike Lentile strives for a better time.

Practicing high jump in the gym can be tough, but Karla Cooper makes it look easy.

At the starting line, John Dudek and Greg Mason concentrate on their jump.

Using his great forehand, Steve Jones returns the serve.

Girl's Tennis: front — Janie Aylestock, Kirsten Kelly, Elizabeth Kenyon, Kim Wimer. 2nd row — Janice Sweeney, Gina Lupino, Susan Pender. back — Kimer McGrail, Donna Stewart, Kirsten Kleeb, Kim Fox.

Back handing the ball, Kimer McGrail sets up for a volley.

Racketeers

By the beginning of March, the tennis teams had hit the courts. Five days a week, the NOVA courts were full of Spartan racketeers sharpening their form and perfecting their games.

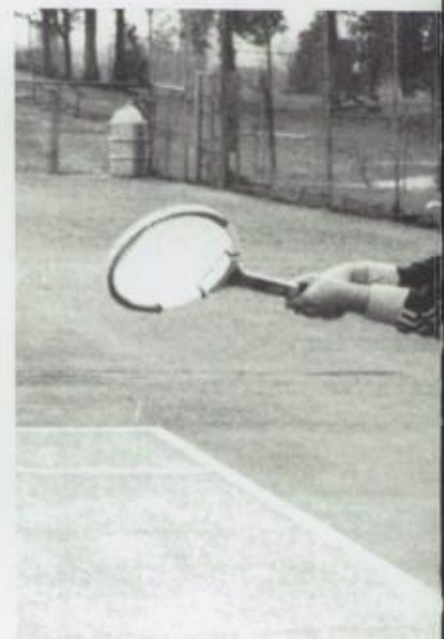

The boys' team, coached by Bill Byrd, had only six players in March. "We're in trouble people-wise," said senior Steve Jones. "We have six people and we really need about thirteen!" Coach Byrd added, "It's a long road home. They're on the way, but they need work. If they work, I think they'll come around."

The girls' team, coached by Ms. Price from Seneca Ridge, had eleven players out at the beginning of March. They practiced at the Sterling Golf and Swim Club and occasionally at the NOVA courts. Most of the girls, including Kimer McGrail, Kirstin Kleeb and Elizabeth Kenyon, were underclassmen. Senior Janie Aylestock said, "We lost a few people last year, and this year might really be tough, but everyone works and we enjoy it. That's important."

"A lot of us are young," said sophomore Kimer McGrail. "we're starting from the very beginning."

After a hard hit serve, Tom Grant gives a great return.

Without financial support from advertisers, these publications would not exist.

Ads

Like everyone else these days, school publications need money. The businesses who advertise in this section support our school; some advertise in the football program, the Spartan, and Unbound, in addition to the Shield. Advertising causes students and other members of the community to interact. This interaction gives students a better understanding of business, and business a better understanding of students.

But the involvement goes even deeper. Some of these advertisers are parents of Broad Run students. It's likely that these parents are members of the Booster Club, which actively supports all school activities. Also, many Broad Run students work at these businesses, pumping gas, cleaning or grilling hamburgers.

Take note of the names on the patron page. These people show their support by offering congratulations to graduates, or just good wishes to the student body.

As you flip through these pages, you'll see some familiar places and faces, and some you'll probably want to get to know better.

David,
 I'm really glad we met each other this year! I hope we can stay friends
 for a long long time. Hasn't this year passed us
 by fast? We just started. Well, you have a great summer!
 Keep in touch!
 Love always,

 Hope you have a real nice summer. Hope to see you next year. Keep in touch.

In order to donate money to his favorite club, Keith George signed up for the Bowl-a-thon.

This year the Boosters sponsored a Bowl-a-thon in order to raise money for school clubs.

A rebounder, used to help basketball team members improve jumps, was also donated by the Boosters.

Upon obtaining the new video recorder, Coach Cochran wheels it to practice so the team can watch their previous game.

community: (kə 'myü nə tē), n. support.

Our community contributed greatly to Broad Run's growth this past year. Students, parents, and residents of Sterling, Arcola, Ashburn, Broad Run Farms, Sugarland, and Chantilly have shown their concern by trying to help out the school.

Back-to-school night, sponsored by the PTA in October, was an opportunity for all parents to become involved in the school. Parents followed their children's schedules and attended ten-minute classes to meet the teachers. Also on back-to-school night, the PTA and the Booster Club merged in order to form a stronger organization.

The Booster Club contributed a video camera to the football and basketball teams. By having the games taped and then watching the recordings, the players were able to see what they did right and wrong. The Boosters also purchased a rebounder for the basketball team.

Like the Booster, the American Field Service Club and the Band-Aids helped the school. The AFS Club, made up of students' parents, found housing for foreign exchange students in the summer and/or for the year. Band-Aids made possible the new band uniforms, which added a zest to the band's performance.

Throughout the year, many groups and clubs have helped Broad Run grow stronger. With our machines to help teams practice and our uniforms that spice up the performers comes a greater sense of pride. This could only happen with the support we received from the community.

A retired commander from the Navy, Cdr. Ernest Lietzan gives a speech on Watergate to Mr. Mulhern's government class. Cdr. Lietzan has studied the Watergate scandal extensively.

Freshmen Wendy Barnes and Sandy Linn carefully check the band uniforms.

Poland, Sandra Day O'Connor, Lech Walesa, PATCO Strike, Anwar Sadat, and the Pope all made headlines this year.

Keeping up with the school news, Sharon Jackson reads the Spartan.

On the topic of the air traffic controllers strike Bryan Callahan said, "I think they were a bunch of fools."

"I think we need more female Supreme Court justices. But I don't think it will have any effect on the decisions of the court, because nothing could prevent a man from making the same decisions as a woman could on such controversial subjects as abortion," believes Lori Young.

happenings: ('hap ə ningz), n. the way it was.

As Walter Cronkite would say, it has been a difficult year for America. But, as she always does, she came through with flying colors. This was a year of assassination, celebration, and anticipation.

The assassination attempts

March 30, 1981: President Ronald Reagan was shot by John Hinckley outside the Washington Hilton. Several others were also wounded, including James Brady, the President's press secretary. Although the President recovered in a relatively short time, Mr. Brady spent many months recovering from the shot he received to the head.

May 13, 1981: Pope John Paul II, while conducting outdoor audiences, was shot by Mehmet Ali Agca. The Pope spent a long time recovering from a wound received in the stomach, a highly infectious area.

The assassination

October 28, 1981: Anwar Sadat, president of Egypt, was assassinated by a group of Muslim fanatics while he was reviewing the troops of the Egyptian Army.

The celebrations

July 17, 1981: Sandra Day O'Connor was nominated as the first woman justice to serve on the Supreme Court.

July 29, 1981: Charles, Prince of Wales, married Lady Diana Spencer in St. Paul's Cathedral in London. The ceremony was viewed by 750 million people all over the world.

July 29, 1981, the world saw a fairytale come to life. A shy young Lady, Diana, married her Prince, Charles.

January 20, 1982: The country celebrated two 1st anniversaries this day: the release of the hostages from the American Embassy in Tehran, Iran, and the inauguration of President Ronald Reagan.

January 28, 1982: Brigadier General James Dozier, the 2nd highest ranking NATO officer in Europe, was released unharmed after being held captive for 42 days by Red Brigade terrorists in Italy.

The anticipation

August 3, 1981: The members of PATCO, the air traffic controllers union, went on strike. Many parents of Broad Run students were controllers at the FAA building in Leesburg. The ex-controllers went on to take new jobs, such as driving trucks or selling computers.

December 17, 1981: All over the world people cried out in anger over the imposition of martial law in Poland. In Poland itself, there were mass house arrests. Products became scarce and in January prices of most consumer goods went up as much as 500%.

January 13, 1982: Shortly after taking off from Washington's National Airport, Air Florida Flight 90 hit the 14th Street bridge and then dropped into the Potomac River. Rescue operations were hampered by frigid weather. Relatives of those who were on the plane waited anxiously to see if their loved ones were among the 6 survivors. 78 died in the crash.

Nice weather and the senior court lure John Sullivan into a Frisbee game after lunch.

The Sociology class wedding is graced by the presence of many distinguished guests. Mr. Holmes, Dr. Friedlander, and Miss Helm are just a few who came.

Escaping from class, Cindi Haberman hides in the library.

farewell: (far'wel), n. good-bye.

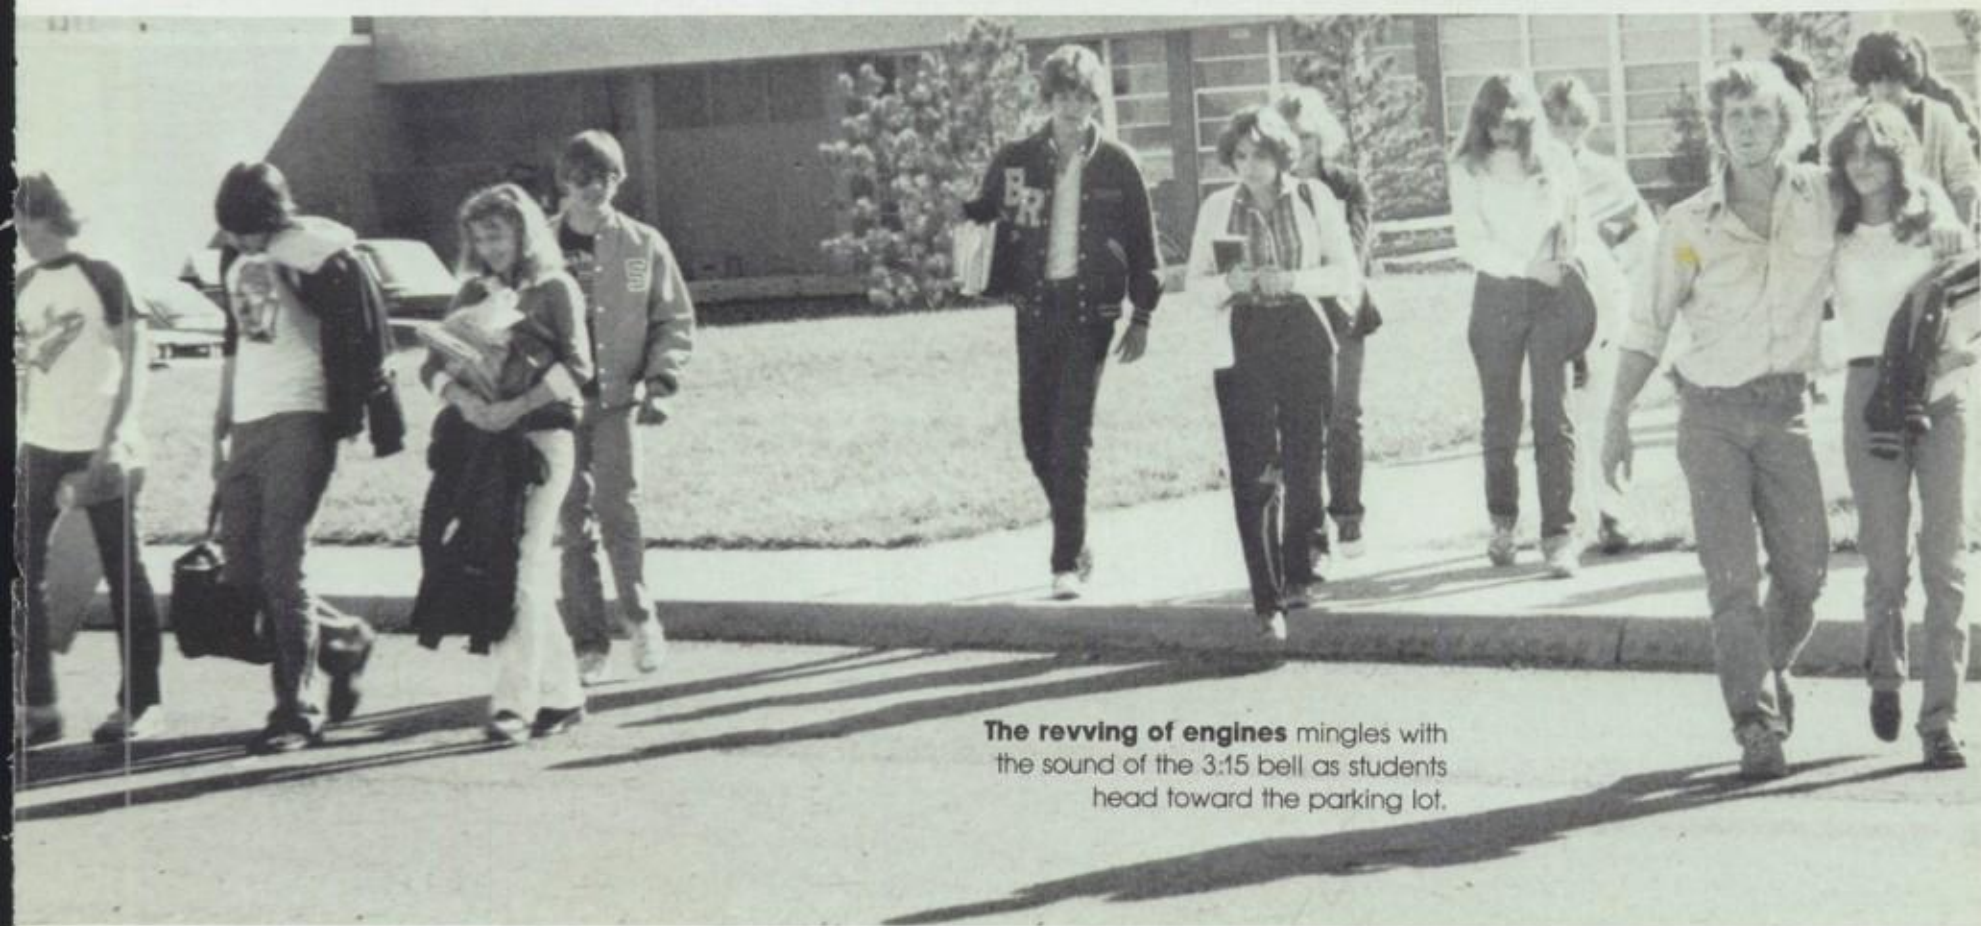

Believe it or not, the school year is over. No more report cards, exams, or missed homework to worry about for almost 3 months. It is time to leave the pens, pencils, books, and teacher's dirty looks behind. Some of us will hit the beach, while others of us will work. But for a while, school will be the last thing on our minds.

The Duke of Broad Run, Duke Jackson, takes a break at his locker.

It is difficult to comprehend that 10 long months ago we were all stumbling around trying to find our classes. For those 10 months we made new friends, kept the old, and even made a few enemies. Now it is time to move on.

We leave, knowing this year we were the best. Good-bye.

Who's that behind those Foster Grants? Duane Slyder.

The revving of engines mingles with the sound of the 3:15 bell as students head toward the parking lot.

David,
well this year has been really fun. Maybe someday we'll have that party huh? You're a great friend who I hope
I have in my classes next year. Good luck always.
Love
Janie
PFE

DAVID,
WELL, WHAT CAN I SAY? WE'VE HAD SOME GOOD TIMES. I REALLY ENJOYED GOING TO
HOMECOMING WITH YOU.
AS I LOOK BACK AT THE THINGS WE DID,
I WISH I WOULD'VE
DONE THINGS DIFFERENT
SO MAYBE THE OUTCOME WOULD BE DIFFERENT.
THANKS FOR ALL OF THE
GOOD TIMES AND MAYBE
IF I'M LUCKY THERE WILL BE MORE IN THE FUTURE. GOOD LUCK ALWAYS.

Love Ya
Amy

Just as a crop is harvested, students are moving on to either graduation or the next grade. This year the school brought us together. Students were joined in holy matrimony.
We banded together to make music. Our crowds cheered our teams on to victory. Every Friday we "clubbed" together, planning fund raisers and activities.

David,
Don't know
you that well
Good Luck
in whatever the hell you do. Tom

David,
It's been a lot of fun this year hangin around going on Sunn's bike trip (when you were with us) and camping. See if you can convince Scott and you to come of the bike/camping trip this summer it will be a lot of fun! Don't let Jimmy turn you into a freak.
See ya around,
Chuck (Schonder)

David,
I'm Glad that you are a friend of mine and I hope we will stay
friends for a long while.
Stay the way you are.
Good luck in every thing
you do. F.F.E RMA
Marvin Wimberly

P.S. we need to get to Pizza Hut sometimes over the summer. Call ME.

To a really nice guy who I hope
I'll get to know better! Good luck
in the future!

Love
Deana

David,
To a very nice guy who I will always remember. You & I have (in my Good luck w/ opinion) have become the girls. close friends. You're a super guy. If you ever have any problems, I'll be there to help you.
P.S. Keep in touch
Love, Angie

David, in your life, it's not you know your friend. I don't want you tell your friend a story of a friend. You're a friend of mine. I of it. You're a friend of mine. I also about it. I can't see you. I also about it. I can't see you. I but only you and I. I don't be your friend. I don't want if you're a friend of mine.

David,
you are a really good friend, weird, but nice

don't ever forget those fun times we had in geography.
I really hope I see you next year, and I hope we can still be good friends (I think)

Well good luck!

Love,
Michael

David
this year in lunch
would not have been what it was without you. always remember our food
fights. Love
Mandy

David, real nice guy and I hope you stay that way always.
also, stay as cute as you are. Luv ya lots,
Wendy

David,
you're a really sweet
guy. Have fun partying
this summer. See you next year.
Maisy

David,
I really think you're a good looking guy. Have a great summer + cell
see ya next year. Luv ya,
Daria

David,
I love you so much and I know you're the sweetest
guy I know.
I hope you have a great summer
and I hope you stay that way
always. Love,
Maisy

Jamie,
You're a real nice guy and I like you lots. (Except when you tease me about my "profession") We'll have to have a lot of parties
summer, if I'm here.
Wuv ya wots,
